Big Talk Coming
Huey Long's Ghost
Mussolini Explains
Hitler Says Forever

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

All political talk is about the President's address "on the state of the Union," arranged for tonight. The President has promised "I will not pull my punches," meaning that he will deal bluntly with his opponents.

A Texas congressman, who believes that anything worth having is worth fighting for, advises the President to "get tough" in this speech, and the President intimates that he will take the advice, as far as is consistent with presidential dignity.

Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman, upset by the proposed Roosevelt address "on the state of the Union," says the President, making the address at night under dramatic circumstances under the dome of the Capitol, will drag that "address" down to the level of a political speech.

Mr. Fletcher says the radio stations give the President "free time" on all radios, silencing all other broadcasts, and they should do as much for the Republican party to let Republicans answer the President.

The problem for Chairman Fletcher would be to find a radio speaker to equal President Roosevelt's radio performance. In President Roosevelt's broadcast every word is heard distinctly, even the last word of each sentence. The average American swallows that whole.

It might be more important for Chairman Fletcher to have his Republican orators listen carefully when the President speaks. Wise Peter the Great said, "My brother Charles is teaching me a great deal about war," referring to the King of Sweden. Brother Franklin can teach a great deal about broadcasting.

The important question for Democrats now is:

"Can we, who are alive, beat Huey Long, who is dead, in Louisiana on January 21?"

If Long were living, there would be no question about his ability to dispose of his Louisiana as it might please him.

If the dead do return, as alleged by spiritualist friends, there will be one active, much-annoyed ghost present at every important meeting during the campaign.

His name will be Huey Long. With Long dead and in his grave it will be an interesting fight between the living administration and a ghost.

Mussolini's government says it is bombing Ethiopians with more energy than usual because the Ethiopians captured two Italian aviators who fell at Daggah Bur, "cut their heads off and carried them in triumph to Harar." Mussolini does not like that.

The important fact is that in future air raids, hospitals, churches, red crosses on roofs, venerable monuments will not turn away bombing planes.

Mussolini declares that on the appearance of Italian planes Ethiopian chiefs hurry to the nearest Red Cross station for protection.

The English, horrified by Italian bombing in Ethiopia, would be interested, if they have forgotten about it, to see photographs of one big Egyptian city after British warships had finished its bombardment. It was an exceptionally complete job, nothing left standing.

In a New Year message to Germany, Chancellor Hitler says:

"Our work stands for all time."

And you wonder, quite seriously, what particular work the German chancellor had in mind.

If he refers to the fact that the Nazis repudiated the Versailles treaty and found the Allies timidly acquiescent, you are bound to admit that he did a good thing for Germany, assuming that his present preparations for war will not inflict upon the German nation a greater disaster than the big war, which resulted in dismemberment.

If he refers to cowardly persecution of Germans of Jewish descent, outnumbered one hundred to one in Germany's population, they are bound to tell him that brutal cowardice never "stands for all time."

Japan's minister of the navy, Mineo Osumi, explains, with exquisite Oriental courtesy, that Japan, having chosen her path, will move ahead, and, in the language of the west, those that do not like it may "lump it."

"Enforcing stability in the Orient * * * bringing peace to the world by making other nations understand fully Japan's principle of no-force and no-aggression * * * the whole world needs a stable peace in the Orient."

MISSING CAMBRIDGE GIRL, 9, HUNTED

Parents Fear Foul Play

PRECIOUS PERRY

Firemen Join Search for Her

Fearful of another Peggy McCarthy fiend slaying, Cambridge police were searching cellars, vacant houses and vacant stores today for Precious Perry, nine-year-old East Cambridge schoolgirl.

Precious, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Perry of 161 Charles street, has been missing since 3:30 p. m. yesterday, an hour after she had been dismissed from her fourth-grade class in the Thorndike School.

The girl was dismissed about 10 minutes after her classmates and was last seen in Hurley street, a short distance from the school, by Rita Muscatelli. Just before that she had been seen in Seventh and Ninth streets by other pupils, they told police.

Since then nothing has been seen or heard from Precious, who has

CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT

"The particular phraseology of the Constitution of the United States confirms and strengthens the principle, supposed to be essential to all written constitutions, that a law repugnant to the Constitution is void; and that the courts, as well as other departments, are bound by that instrument."

RULE MYTHEN BOY'S DEATH 'ACCIDENT'

Death of Bobby Mythen, 18-year-old Winthrop High School senior, who vanished on Beacon Hill on Christmas morning, 1934, was described today as due to "accidental drowning" in the report of an inquest conducted by Judge Francis J. Good of municipal court.

Young Mythen's body was found in the Charles River, March 19, 1935, after his family had spent weeks searching Beacon Hill and questioning residents of that district for news of his whereabouts.

Two months ago, at the insistence of the boy's parents Asst. Atty-Gen. Henry P. Fielding conducted an investigation of the death during which four companions of Mythen and a number of Beacon Hill residents were questioned.

NO "UNLAWFUL ACT"

In his report, Judge Good wrote:

"Evidence presented to me and the reasonable inference to be drawn therefrom would permit a finding that the young man died from drowning by accident.

"There is no reason to believe that the young man took his own life, and upon such evidence as was presented relative to the cause and manner of his death I do not find the unlawful act of any person or persons contributed to his death.

'Nothing was seen of the young man after Christmas until March 19, 1935.

"Much evidence was presented to me, all highly significant but not to the matter which this inquest is intended to determine, namely the cause and manner of the death."

France Questions Aid of Britain

Paris, Jan. 3 (AP)—Paris newspapers reported today that France has asked Great Britain if she is willing to send troops to the German frontier, to replace French soldiers, in case of war with Italy.

The newspapers Paris-Soir and Intransigeant indicated the question was raised in discussions between the British and French general staffs, in which the two nations were considering how they would aid each other in the event Italy attacked British ships in the Mediterranean.

SCHOOL JURY HEARS JUDGE, 5 OTHERS

Further indictments were expected as the grand jury today resumed its investigation into the school scandals and charges of job grafting.

Six persons appeared today before the grand jury.

They included Special Justice Leo F. Doherty of municipal court, Professor Joseph F. Wagner, assistant music director in the Boston schools; Representative George Demeter of the Back Bay; James Hawkes of Jamaica Plain, vice-president of the Boston Musician's Union; his sister, Miss Esther Hawkes, and John E. Devlin, friend of Professor Wagner.

DEATH THREATS DENIED

Reports about the courthouse that Hawkes had received death threats in letters warning him not to testify before the grand jury were denied by District Attorney Foley and by Attorney Herbert F.

Death Takes the Wheel

Auto Skids Into Train, Driver Dies

Wet roads gave Death the opportunity to take the wheel today, and as a result the Greater Boston auto toll reached five, the state toll six, for the New Year.

Two persons were killed, six others are dying, and injuries were inflicted on three others as Death rode the highways on the heels of the sleet and rain storm.

AUTOS HAVE KILLED 5 IN GREATER BOSTON THIS YEAR

At the Beaver Brook crossing of the Boston and Maine railroad in Waltham, Joseph St Pierre, 51, of Upland road, Cambridge, was fatally injured when his auto skidded through the gates and was struck by the Montreal express.

Mrs. Emma Winter of 26 Magnolia street, Lawrence, was the sixth person to die in the state. She passed away at noon at Lawrence General Hospital from injuries sustained in a collision last night.

Mrs. Louisa R. Cook, 72, was injured, perhaps fatally, when a milk truck struck her at Massachusetts and Bartlett avenues, Arlington, today, as she was on her way to church.

DRIVER QUESTIONED

The driver of the truck, said by police to have been Roger B. Smith, was questioned but not held. He said that she was dressed in black clothing and that he couldn't see her in the rain.

Mrs. Cook, who celebrated her 55th wedding anniversary last Armistice Day, was taken to Symmes

3 CITIES COMBED FOR REPUCCI PAL

Repucci's own story to captors—Page 6

Handcuffed to two Boston policemen, and closely watched by a third, Antonio Repucci was taken back to state prison today.

Repucci escaped with another convict, Edward Guarnelli, on December 23 while they were being transported back to prison after a special hearing in Dedham court. Their guard was killed.

Police searched more than two-score buildings in East Boston, Chelsea and Everett, for Guarnelli today, in spite of Repucci's story that his companion borrowed money and fled from this section.

Guarnelli will not give up without a gun battle, Repucci warned the police.

TAKEN IN RHODE ISLAND

Repucci, recaptured late yesterday in Providence, as he was starting for New York on a truck, was meek and quiet as he reached the prison in Charlestown.

He was put into prison clothes

ROOSEVELT'S TALK WAITED BY CONGRESS

BULLETIN

Washington, Jan. 3 (INS)—Passage of the "united veterans" soldiers' bonus bill in the House on next Thursday was proposed to House leaders today by spokesmen for the three major veterans' organizations.

Washington, Jan 3 (INS)—Rent with political controversy and enmeshed in the coming presidential election, the seventy-fourth Congress reconvened at noon today to tackle an imposing legislative program.

The banging gavels of Vice President Garner and Speaker Byrns brought Senate and House into session under a barrage of political fireworks.

President Roosevelt himself touched off the spark of politics by arranging to deliver his annual message on the "state of the Union" at an almost unprecedented night session. He did this in order to reach a nation-wide audience.

It immediately provoked charges from Republicans that he was transforming a dignified presidential duty into a "vaudeville performance."

A joint resolution inviting the President to address Congress at

STOCKS HIGHER

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—The stock market displayed general strength today despite selling pressure on silver and alcohol shares.

Union Pacific and Atchison surpassed their 1935 highs and rail equipments were in demand.

the night session was approved by both Senate and House without objection. It was introduced in the Senate, approved without a dissenting voice, rushed to the House and adopted there by unanimous consent.

Republican objections were confined to statements to the press.

Jammed galleries observed the opening ceremonies, which were rather brief and routine. House and Senate chaplains called down the blessing of Almighty God upon the President and the legislators. Then the rolls were called, new members were sworn in and the usual resolutions were adopted notifying the President that Congress was in session.

An air of seriousness surrounded the opening session. Members of House and Senate were concerned over legislative problems and their effect upon the presidential election next November. Topping the program were the World War Bonus Bill and a new permanent neutrality act.

CROWD TO HEAR HIM

The President was expected to touch upon both these issues in his message. He will deliver it at 9 o'clock tonight at a joint session of both bodies of Congress in the House Chamber. An unprecedented scramble for tickets has been under way since his plan became known.

In the House, Speaker Byrns drew an outburst of applause from both Democrats and Republicans as he mounted the rostrum just befor the stroke of noon. He bowed smilingly, looked at the huge House clock—from which the hands were stolen a week ago—waited for the moment of noon and banged his gavel. The House was in session.

In the Senate, Garner went through a similar proceeding. He, however, did not win a round of applause, the Senate being a bit more decorous.

Four new Representatives were sworn in in the House—Edward W. Creal (D.), Kentucky; William A. Barry (D.), New York; Edward W. Curley (D.), New York, and Verner W. Main (R.), Michigan—the Townsendite.

One new Senator, Elmer Austin Benson (F. L.), Minnesota, was sworn in by Vice-President Garner. Benson succeeded the late Thomas B. Schall (R.), Roosevelt critic.

The Senate was informed officially of the deaths of the colorful Senator Huey Pierce Long and of Schall. Senator Overton (D.), Louisiana, announced he would deliver "appropriate remarks" on Long's assassination at a later date.

Senator Gore (D.), Oklahoma, who is blind, meanwhile occupied Long's former seat in the front row of the Democratic side.

A touch of color was given the Senate session, when Senators Robinson and Borah (R.), Idaho, affectionately called attention to the seventy-eighth birthday of Senator Carter Glass (D.), Virvinia. Both praised Glass' long public service.

The Senate session was brief 20 minutes, with a recess then until 8:30 tonight to march on the House in a body to hear the President.

The House session lasted longer, because its roll-call of 435 members required nearly an hour. While the roll was being called, members milled in the aisles and conversed in tones audible in the galleries. It was only the usual situation in the House but it amazed first-time visitors.

There was a bit of political byplay just before the resolution was adopted. Rep. Rich (R.) Pennsylvania, tried to get the floor, apparently to denounce the President's plan. He was waved down by Republican colleagues.

A moment later, Representatives Bankhead, Snell and Doughton (D) North Carolina, appeared in the well of the House chamber and announced they had extended the invitation to the President. This drew a big laugh, since none of the three had left the chamber.

Bankhead, speaking for this committee, said the President would be "pleased" to address a joint session at 9 o'clock tonight.

Bonus Bill Offered, Battle on Cash Looms

Washington, Jan. 3 (INS)—As the United Veterans' Bonus Bill was introduced in Congress today, 50 House members decided to continue their battle for payment of the bonus by an "inflation" measure.

The bill, backed by the leading veterans' organizations was introduced by Senator Clark (D), Missouri, and Representatives Vinson (D), Kentucky, and McCormack (D), Massachusetts.

The 50 members adopted a resolution instructing the Patman Bill steering committee to demand a vote in the House on payment of the bonus by issuance of new money.

INFLATIONISTS WEAKEN

The meeting was held on call of the Patman steering bill committee which invited the 218 members of the House, who signed a petition for a vote on the bill, to be present.

The small attendance was regarded as an indication of a weakening on the part of the inflation forces. Some members attending the meeting frankly declared that congressional leaders would shelve the Patman bill.

Heads of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Disabled Veterans, who are backing the United Bill, came in for censure.

"I don't care what the leaders of the veterans' organizations do in Washington, I know that in my district the people are for the Patman bill," said Representative Blanton (D.), Texas.

"VETS DON'T CARE"

"The American Legion convention at St. Louis did not express the opinion of the rank and file," shouted Representative McFarlane (D.), Texas. "Their bill would give the bankers a $2,000,000,000 bonus."

Representative Nichols (D.), Oklahoma, said: "The veterans don't give a damn how they are paid."

Representative O'Malley (D.), Wisconsin, asserted that passage of the united veterans bill would mean more taxes.

"If we are going to pass a bonus bill that takes more taxes we are suckers," he said.

Neutrality Bill to Keep U. S. Out of Wars

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—A permanent neutrality bill which would give the President broad discretionary power to embargo war materials and retain existing mandatory embargoes on actual implements of war for belligerent nations was introduced in the House by Chairman McReynolds (D.-Tennessee), of the foreign affairs committee, as the first bill of the session.

McReynolds said the bill is "satisfactory to the administration." It was drafted after lengthy conferences with the President and state department officials.

Planning to open hearings Tuesday, the Tennesseean asserted the bill was introduced as a basis for the committee's work.

Designed to replace the present neutrality act, whose mandatory features expire February 29, the bill keeps those prohibitions on shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war to warring nations.

McReynolds said that "to preserve the Monroe Doctrine," he would submit an amendment to his committee that would make the mandatory embargoes on war equipment inapplicable to American countries warring with non-American nations.

Food and medical supplies would be excepted in a section giving the President the right to proclaim embargoes on articles and materials used for war purposes, over and above the ordinary peace-time trade with belligerent countries.

McReynolds said that in this respect his bill would differ slightly from one to be submitted to the Senate by Senator Pittman (D-Nev), chairman of the foreign relations committee.

"I desire quite a good deal of discretion in the hands of the President on this proposition," McReynolds asserted.

A barrier also is raised in the measure against financial transactions with warring countries.

Judge Before Grand Jury

Callahan, for Hawkes. Attorney Callahan said:

"No threats or intimation of threats have ever been received."

Judge Doherty, who arrived with former Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle as counsel, was before the grand jury for half an hour. Wagner and Demeter were in the room for 20 minutes each.

Following his appearance before the grand jury, Representative Demeter returned and said he recalled answers to several questions put to him. He was allowed to go again into the room and remained for half an hour on his second appearance.

According to the district attorney's office, Judge Doherty and Representative Demeter were called at the request of the grand jurors themselves.

RECORD SESSION

Word that these persons had been called came after a record session of the grand jury that was not concluded until 8:30 in the evening. A parade of a dozen witnesses filed in and out of the jury room to testify.

Foley explained that he held the jury in session last night in order to end the special session some time today. The regular grand jury convenes Monday when it is expected that 12 architects will be called in regard to the award of contracts.

Wagner has finished his story. Last week he told Foley that he was approached and offered a higher position in the school department for payment of $2000. Later this figure was reduced to $1400, he told Foley at that time.

Devlin followed Wagner to the stand and later jurors heard Miss Hawkes and William Leonard, of Charlestown, who is employed in Devlin's tavern.

Other witnesses were Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of schools; Dr. Charles E. Mackey, of South Boston, chairman of the school committee; Maurice J. Tobin, Frederick R. Sullivan and Dr. Joseph V. Lyons, school committee members.

Also Miss Ellen Cronin, secretary of the school board; Benedict Fitzgerald, director of music in the Cambridge schools; Captain Francis Doyle, of West Roxbury, former Boston teacher, and Herman Goldstein, of Jamaica Plain, a musician.

Fish Replies to Roosevelt Tomorrow

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—Representative Hamilton Fish, New York Republican, advised the National Republican Club today he will answer President Roosevelt's address to a joint session of Congress, when he speaks at the club tomorrow.

Fish, who has been one of the most voluble Republican critics of the New Deal, telegraphed the club he would answer the President and had been granted a half hour over the Red network of the NBC from 1:15 to 1:45 p. m.

CURLEY URGES SELECTMEN AID TAX PROGRAM

Governor Curley today defended his legislative address and revenue raising program, renewing his attack on the state tax appeal board, when he spoke in the Gardner Auditorium, State House, at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association.

In the face of tax valuations, lessened revenue returns and high public welfare expenditures, the governor declared it is imperative his recommendations be put into effect. He appealed for support from the selectmen's association.

VALUATIONS SHRINK

He declared that over a period of five years taxable valuations of the city of Boston had been reduced by $300,000,000.

He said that when he called upon his predecessor, Governor Ely, to remove Alexander Lincoln, one of the three members of the tax appeal board, Ely said he "couldn't do that" as Lincoln was a heavy contributor to his, Governor Ely's, campaign.

As a result of his protest on the state appeal board, the governor said, Governor Ely increased the board from three to five members and aggravated the situation.

The governor said he could see no relief from the present burden of government costs until private industry here has revived to the extent it has in other places, particularly Detroit, where every mechanic who wants work can find it.

BLAMES "MONEY"

His own recommendations, the Governor charged, are being opposed by organized money that brought about the creation of the tax appeal board.

In reviewing his recommendation for new revenue, the Governor pointed out that there is no tobacco manufacturing in this state and that there should be no hardship brought about through a 2-cent a package take on cigarettes and other tobacco products.

Roosevelt's Address Garb "Informal"

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt chose a cutaway and striped trousers and Mrs. Roosevelt an afternoon dress with hat and coat as appropriate garb for tonight's unusual session of Congress.

Cabinet men all followed the President's lead, and "cabinet wives" the lead of Mrs. Roosevelt, thus making the occasion officially an informal rather than a formal one.

Among the cabinet wives, Mrs. Hull, who entertained Mrs. Roosevelt at lunch today, chose a black crepe afternoon gown, small black hat and black coat; Mrs. Morgenthau, a green gown work with gray baby lamb coat trimmed with silver thau, a green gown with gray fur; Mrs. Cummings, an afternoon gown with mink coat and mink-trimmed hat; Mrs. Roper, black velvet dress with long sleeves, and a Hudson seal coat.

Townsend Letter Is Roared Down

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—Representative Zioncheck (D., Wash.), as the House convened today, asked to introduce a letter he had sent to Dr. F. E. Townsend. He threatened to object to the unanimous consent proposal to recess unless he was permitted to do so.

"There are members of Congress who are going to be defeated unless this letter can be put before the House," he said.

He finally withdrew amid a roar of protests from both sides of the aisle, but later again demanded the floor. He was not recognized by the Speaker.

Roosevelt Budget Ready on Monday

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt, preparing to address Congress tonight, cut his calling list today to a press conference and a cabinet meeting.

The press conference was one of the shortest since he has been in the White House. Obviously in good spirits, he told newsmen the budget message would be ready tomorrow afternoon for submission to Congress Monday.

two sisters, Emily and Beatrice, attending the same school.

Last night the disappearance of the girl was reported to police and a check of relatives and friends homes was begun.

FIREMEN JOIN SEARCH

All said, however, that they had not seen the child.

Today all available policemen were sent into the East Cambridge district and a systematic search of cellars, vacant houses, vacant stores was begun, including a search of the abandoned houses in the Cambridgeport federal housing area.

Firemen brought flood lights to search the darkened cellars and buildings.

Fearing also that the girl might have wandered to the East Cambridge Canal, several blocks from her home, or might have been taken there and thrown in, Police Chief Timothy F. Leahy of Cambridge ordered a search of the canal.

Both the father and mother of the girl expressed the fear that she may have met with foul play at the hands of a fiend, a fate which befell 10-year-old Peggy McCarthy, who vanished near her Somerville home in September, 1933.

Peggy McCarthy's broken body was found in a field several blocks from her home, and since then police all through the country and in Canada and Mexico have been looking for Harry P. Cahill on a charge of attacking and strangling the girl.

The missing girl, according to her parents and school officials, is large for her age, has brown bobbed hair and greenish eyes and was wearing a white beret, blue dress and tan coat.

She was a quiet girl and a good student, the teachers said.

According to school officials, the missing girl had been kept after school for 10 minutes for questioning regarding erasures on her report card.

DEAL'S DEFICIT $1,879,651,192 IN HALF YEAR

Washington, Jan. 3 (INS)—The government ended the first half of its fiscal year with a deficit of $1,879,651,192 on Dec. 31, the treasury balance statement showed today. The fiscal year ends June 30.

This compares with a deficit of $1,699,935,397 at the end of 1934.

Receipts for the first half of the current fiscal year totalled $1,902,009,509, as compared with $1,845,082,517 at the end of the first half of the last fiscal year.

Regular expenditures jumped to $2,106,853,476, against $1,727,797,118 for the same period last year.

Recovery and relief expenditures agregated $1,674,807,226, against $1,817,220,795 in the same period last year.

TOWNSEND BLOC PLANS FIGHT

Washington, Jan. 3 (INS)—A conference to map strategy for favorable consideration of the Townsend plan will be called among House members during the next few days, Representative McGroarty (D.), California, announced today.

McGroarty, chief aid of the Townsend bloc, is sponsoring the bill embracing the old age pension scheme.

A petition to discharge the House ways and means committee from further consideration of the bill and force an immediate vote, already has 60 signatures.

"I am confident the Townsend plan will be enacted in this session," McGroarty said.

(In the year just gone, there were 795 killed in automobile accidents in Massachusetts. There were 668 adults and 127 children. Of the adult toll there were 540 men and 128 women. But of the amazing total of all deaths, 473 were pedestrians. There were only 292 drivers and riders. And there were, also, what police listed as "17 kids on sleds, 7 kids on bicycles.")

By PAUL WHELTON

A kid not on a bicycle is a pedestrian—whether or not he is able to scramble away from a policeman in time and reach his home.

This was not what one kid was able to do in a police division which is not far from Boston's City Hall.

On a late afternoon crossing assignment, a policeman was directing traffic. The automatic signals at this crossing were out of order and he had been sent down in a cruiser car.

Orange fingers of light were hitting the purple of descending night and traffic was all to the west. The date was less than two months ago.

Leaving the right hand lane, a car turned right and a boy tumbled from the spare tire, not expecting the sudden swerve.

Hardly had the youngster rolled once over the pavement when the traffic officer was upon him—picking him up—rushing him to a drugstore on a corner, 150 feet away.

There was blood on the boy's face and he was shrieking. But careful swabbing away with cotton and stinging alcohol disclosed only two cuts on his face, one on the nose and another which had laid open a cheek.

Patched up, the boy was sent to his home. He had sobbed that he was twelve and had been bound less than two streets from where he had been tossed off the car.

Death at Wheel

In a brief period the policeman had a bad few moments of tears in the back room of the drugstore, huddled over some cases of chemicals—the only corner of the store which afforded privacy.

His own boy had been killed by an automobile less than three weeks before.

DEATH TAKES THE WHEEL!

In a Massachusetts town not far from Boston, three boys had been sent on an errand to a neighbor's house. It was early evening and the direct route was by a state highway. When they started out, they were walking on the left side of the road, facing traffic.

On the return trip, their direction reversed, traffic was behind them. They walked near the road's edge, which had a wire cable fence at that point. One of them even crossed to the opposite side of the fence.

There was a sharp curve and a down grade just behind them. Around it a car came swinging at about 40 miles an hour. The boys, hearing the singing tires whining on the curve, glanced back.

Dimmed Lights

One was able to jump for safety. A second was on the other side of the fence. BUT THE THIRD WAS STRUCK AND MASHED BENEATH THE WHEELS OF THE CAR FOR 200 FEET BEFORE IT COULD BE STOPPED.

The driver, a responsible citizen, was horrified at the end of his night's driving. He became hysterical and was near collapse. He had not seen the boys, he sobbed. And the reason he had not seen them was that he had dimmed his headlights a moment before.

In a compilation of fatal automobile accidents in Massachusetts, made by Carl Goodwin of the Massachusetts Safety Council, Boston ends up with the staggering total of 130 dead.

Worcester was second with 34 fatalities, Cambridge and Springfield in a doubtful tie with 21 each, Lowell fourth with 17 and Somerville fifth with 13.

Very few of the thousands of motorists who drive over the Newburyport Turnpike know that the long rolling stretch of road goes over 13 hills.

Road of Fatality

In the office of the Massachusetts Safety Council the turnpike is known as "The Road of the Thirteen Hills," the road of fatality.

In the files of the council there is a photograph of an accident on the turnpike. It shows what was left of a man after he had been jammed between the radiator of a car and the rear of his own machine.

This was a night in last October. The driver who is still alive was in his own lane, well over to the right. He admitted that he was moving at a rapid rate of speed, a fault of the turnpike invitation with its open road and its lack of curves.

The driver felt certain that there was no one in front of him. And then he heard a terrified scream—and at the same time felt a horrible impact. His car sheered off, rolled crazily across the turnpike and stopped, its front end bent and staggered and with the driver trembling and shaking.

Climbing out of his car the driver ran back to a car parked along the road. Still hanging to the rear end was what once had been a living man. He was pinioned to the rear light he had blotted out when he passed, while changing a tire.

With more of carelessness, a youth and a girl were killed in a suburb of Boston on a foggy morning at 1:50 o'clock less than a year ago.

Fell Asleep

Persons living on the street heard the crash and ran out of their homes, many of these persons aroused even from their beds by the noise of the impact, found a light truck overturned after impact with a tree. The dead driver was only 22 years old. His girl companion, also dead, was 24. For 48 feet the truck had torn along the sidewalk.

Investigation by police and the Massachusetts safety council disclosed that the driver apparently had gone to sleep. The investigators sought out the reason and they discovered the following:

The driver had worked all day for a baking company. He had bowled during the evening as a member of the company team.

Then he had driven to the home of a fellow worker, at midnight, to introduce to the latter's wife the girl whom he had taken to the bowling match and who was to have married him within a week.

They had stopped afterward, on the way home, to have lunch. Testimony by witnesses who had seen them in the lunchroom, was that the driver had once rested his head on the counter in sheer fatigue. There had been no liquor.

Half an hour of a nap while the truck was stopped, instead of a few seconds of napping at the wheel, would have saved these two lives.

DEATH TOOK THE WHEEL.

(Tomorrow in the Boston Evening American, will appear another article in this series—Death Takes the Wheel.)

Drunk Driver Blamed In Boy Skater's Death

Winsted, Ct., Jan. 3 (AP)—A severe indictment of persons who operate a motor vehicle after drinking is continued in the finding of Coroner Lester W. Schaeffer, who completed an inquest today into the death of a youth killed by a hit-and-run driver.

The coroner found Albert Dwan, 22, of Torrington, under arrest as the driver of a car that plowed into a party of 11 young people on a skating party, last week, criminally responsible for the death of Thomas Roche, 15. The youth was one of four struck by the car, which left the scene.

Coroner Schaeffer termed the accident "a flagrant example of causing loss of life through the gross misconduct of an operator of a motor vehicle, which misconduct is principally induced by the liquor too freely."

"Dwan," the finding continued, "could give no satisfactory explanation of why he did not see these boys and girls on the highway until just before his automobile struck them."

It only takes a fraction of a second for an automobile accident to happen. But it takes months for a fractured leg to heal properly. Sixteen-year-old Kay Fasano, of 616 East Third street, South Boston, lies on a bed in the plaster room of the Boston City Hospital, while a cumbersome plaster cast is bent around her fractured leg. The lesson-picture of this young girl, fated to spend many painful weary weeks before she can walk again, should be memorized by all drivers. Doctors Otto Aufranc, Charles Reed and Russell Lowell are supervising the work.

Arlington Hospital. She sustained a fractured skull.

In Lawrence, fire apparatus responding to an alarm crushed the automobile of Florence Allicon, 35, against a tree at an intersection today, fracturing the woman's skull and causing other critical injuries.

John J. O'Brien, 45, of Gurney street, Roxbury, was struck and knocked down by an automobile in Alford street, Charlestown.

He is in Haymarket Relief station suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries and his name was placed on the danger list.

Driving toward their homes in New Bedford and Fairhaven, James Stetson, 60, and James Foster, 42, were injured when their auto skidded and went off the state highway in Taunton.

Stetson is dying at the Morton Hospital in Taunton, and Foster is recovering from a shaking up.

A skidding auto, driven, police say, by William J. Gordon, 18, of Chestnut street, Weston, smashed into a state highway truck in Weston street, Waltham, early today, and injured two state highway employes.

Robert Turnbull, 58, of Burlington, is dying in Waltham Hospital from internal injuries, two terribly broken legs and other hurts.

Herman Koester, 47, also of Burlington, is suffering from injuries to his legs and body. Gordon was arrested for allegedly driving under the influence of liquor.

WOMAN DYING

A skidding machine in Lawrence crashed into an auto in which Mrs. Emma Winter, 60, of Magnolia street, Lawrence, was riding, inflicting injuries upon her which may cause her death.

Donald H. Smith, 14, of Prospect street, Leominster, was slightly injured by an auto while he was crossing a street near his home on his new pair of skis.

Extra precautions were taken by Worcester street authorities to sand and make as safe as possible the southwest cutoff of the Boston-Hartford state highway when the sleet storm made the thoroughfare an icy glare.

At Concord, N. H., the State Motor Vehicle Department issued a warning today to drivers to "keep off the roads unless it is absolutely necessary to be out."

The warning was issued after receipt of reports that highways from the White Mountains south were coated with ice, making driving hazardous. No reports had been received early today from north of the mountains.

Two persons, Benjamin McLaughlin of Worcester, and Mrs. Marguerite Crowley of Gardner were severely hurt in two accidents in Worcester, caused by icy highways and skidding automobiles.

SISTERS INJURED

Two Charlestown sisters were also injured today when, according to police, they ran into the pathway of a sedan operated by Jacob Cline of Blue Hill avenue, from behind a truck on Main street.

The two sisters, Elizabeth, 8 and Catherine, 6, of 8 Mill street, were taken to the Haymarket Relief where Elizabeth was found to have suffered a severe shaking up and Catherine received contusions of the right thigh and hip.

ADELE DANCES AGAIN

Adele Astaire

New York, Jan 3 (AP)—Adele Astaire, who forsook stardom in musical comedy to become Lady Charles Cavendish, danced again last night for a society audience.

Her appearance at a lavish ball given by Elsa Maxwell was said to be her first exhibition since she married into English nobility in 1932.

Another titled woman, Beatrice Lillie, who in private life is Lady Peel, also performed for Miss Maxwell's 700 guests at one of the most extraordinary fetes given here in years.

After a late supper a row of dressing rooms was set up in the hotel ballroom and each guest was provided with a costume, made of red and white crepe paper, representing styles of historical periods.

The ball then became a masquerade with prizes offered for guests who could mask their identities until breakfast time. Pink champagne was served.

ITALIANS SPUR REVOLT, WORRY ETHIOPIANS

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Jan. 3—Ethiopian officials reported today numerous clashes in the northwest province of Gojjam province, where they charged Italians have caused the natives to revolt against payment of imperial taxes.

Dissension is attributed to a nephew of Ras Hailu, former governor of the province. Ras Hailu was deposed in 1933 on charges of intrigues with Italians.

Five thousand troops were sent from Addis Ababa to quell Ras Hailu's great following.

Thousands of copies of an appeal for loyalty to Emperor Haile Selassie, signed by the Abuna (high bishop) of Ethiopia's Coptic Christian Church, have been sent to the province for distribution.

Ras Hailu has been held in chains on a prison island in Lake Zwai, south of Addis Ababa, since he was deposed.

The trouble in Gojjam was said to explain why Emperor Haile Selassie has postponed his trip to the northern front from his field headquarters at Dessye.

Coupled with failure to hear from Ras Kassa and reports of serious setbacks to War Minister Ras Mulugheta, this development was causing the greatest concern for the government.

Paris Paper Reports Mutiny of Italians

Paris, Jan. 3 (AP)—The anti-Fascist newspaper Oeuvre today carried reports from Rome of a mutiny of Italian troops in which a Fascist militiaman was killed and several soldiers injured.

The dispatch said the mutiny occurred at Lugo di Romagna as a detachment of infantrymen was preparing to leave for Ethiopia.

Oeuvre also carried a report of a mutiny aboard the Italian oil tanker Corona Ferrea after it had left the Rumanian port of Constanza.

Mussolini "Strong Arm" Warning Heard Again

Copyright, 1936, Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 3—Italy's Fascist party, glorifying force anew as the way to dispose of its enemies, summoned the people to meetings throughout the kingdom today to hear officials repeat Premier Mussolini's speech of a decade ago, defending strong-armed methods to crush domestic opposition.

Today marked the start of the fourth month of East African hostilities.

Mussolini summoned the defense council for its 13th annual meeting February 4, the cabinet on January 30, and the central corporation committee and the Fascist grand council, both on January 18.

He also received his ambassador to Berlin, Bernardo D. Attolico. Informed observers believed he wanted a thorough report of the probable German attitude in the event of new sanctions.

Sweden Presses Probe Of Red Cross Bombing

Stockholm, Jan. 3 (AP)—Sweden's government swung into line with the Red Cross today in pressing for a thorough investigation of the Italian bombing of a Swedish Red Cross unit on the southern Ethiopian front.

The nation's press demanded Sweden obtain satisfaction from Italy for the aerial assault.

Slayers of Italian Commander Captured

Tunis, Jan. 3 (AP)—Eight mutinous native soldiers who killed their Italian commander, Lieutenant Biondi, in Tripoli, were arrested and disarmed at French advance posts today after crossing the Tunisian frontier.

4 Hurt, 50 Flee Blaze in Hotel

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 3 (INS)—Fire of undetermined origin today razed the five-story, 140-room Biltmore Hotel, causing loss estimated at $150,000.

Four persons were injured in a wild scramble that ensued when flames burst suddenly through the roof of the engine room annex and attacked the main hotel structure. Two of the injured were in serious condition.

More than 50 guests were driven to the street in night clothing.

Watertown Fire Chief Gets $100

Chief John W. O'Hearn of the Watertown fire department today received a letter of praise accompanied by a $100 check for the firemen's relief fund from Arthur B. Newhall, president of the Hood Rubber Company.

Newhall complimented the department for quick work in subduing the threatening blaze last Tuesday at the company's shipping plant, located on the grounds of the United States arsenal.

Springfield 'Rip Van Winkle' Sleeps 10 Years

HEARS, OBEYS WIFE ONLY

Springfield, Jan. 3—Victim of a mysterious disease, William H. Lord, 62, today began the 10th year of a baffling sleep from which he had been aroused but twice.

His eyes closed, Lord has all the appearance of a hypnotized man as he sits stolidly in his chair, unaffected by heat, light or any stimuli except the voice of his devoted wife.

Even during a gay New Year's family reunion, in which his seven children and 15 grandchildren gathered about him, he slumbered at the festive board.

OBEYS ONLY WIFE

Patiently ministered to by his wife, Lord obeys his wife's requests like an automaton. Every day, she dresses him, feeds him and occasionally gives him a pipe to smoke.

At her command, he reaches for a glass of water or for food. No other person, not even his children, receive any response from him.

Appeals to noted brain specialists to make an intensive study of Lord's case now are planned, although his family are almost convinced that his case in incurable. The family have no funds for experimentation.

FALLS ASLEEP

On October 26, 1926, Lord, then a weaver, fell into a deep sleep. Doctors tried to arouse him, but to no avail.

One day in 1930, Lord's eyes quivered. He shook himself and awoke. His relatives were overjoyed. Kinfolk came from Canada to play checkers and cards with the revived man. Then, three tered and he slipped back into his deep coma.

In 1933, Lord again recovered consciousness. His wife talked with him. He expressed amazement at the changes that had occurred during his absence, in radios, automobiles, moving pictures.

WOULD STAY AWAKE

He pleaded with his wife not to allow him to go to sleep again, but after 45 days, his eyelids fluttered and and he slipped back into his coma.

WILLIAM H. LORD
Wakes But Twice

He is thin and colorless, emaciated by his long confinement. All day long he sits with an expressionless face and at night his wife puts him to bed like a helpless child.

Only one thing, apparently, has Lord carried from the land of the living. Occasionally, when he wants water, he runs his tongue over his lips.

Otherwise, he is a man in this world, but not of it.

Eben Sears Acts On Guest Riders

Eben W. Sears, a Lynn constable, has safeguarded himself against suits by guest riders in his automobile by having printed cards which say that the rider is in the machine at his own risk. Everyone who rides with Sears, he said, will have to sign the cards, thus relieving him of liability in case of accident.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Signals Crossed in Race for Council Presidency

Joe Mulhern Backs Tobin; Then Joe's Friend, Agnew, Enters; Now All's Chaos

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, or both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American.

• • •

"Senator," says Timmy, "I see you beat the papers two weeks with Joe McAllister's appointment as aid to Dictaphone Dick."

"A mere nothing, Timmy," says The Senator. "You'll see Joe's place on the executive secretarial staff taken by some newspaperman with enough publicity savvy to build up Governor Jim's campaign for convention delegates and the like of that."

THE SENATOR

It is at this point that the man in the dented derby appears and he would look like a tout if he did not sound like a side-show barker.

"Come one, come all," announces the man in the dented derby, fixing The Senator with a snake-eye, "for the measly price of one bar rye, I will perform the trick of the ages and eat a bite of the glass after drinking the contents."

"Stranger," says The Senator, "you are not on my list of those whose throats I wish to see cut, but if you can do the trick I will buy the rye."

So Timmy sets out the bar rye and the man in the dented derby pours one very fast, gulps it, bites a large piece out of the side of the glass, chews, swallows and helps himself to a snack of cheese.

"Very neat," says The Senator, "a very neat trick, indeed, I see how you can go for the bar rye."

"Senator," says Timmy, as the man in the dented derby bows himself away from the bar, "you miss the best trick. He is the best finger-glass man I ever see. If he comes back, watch him pour the rye with his thumb and forefinger curled around the glass top and the rye up to the top of them."

"I missed that," says The Senator. "By the way, there is a nice quiet go in progress over the City Council presidency. For awhile it looked like Martin Tobin, hands down, but now it's all mixed up.

• • •

Jimmy Agnew in Race

"Martin had Senator Joe Mulhern's backing and the promise of 11 votes which, with his own, would elect him. Now, who has come into the race but Allston Jimmy Agnew, very close friend of Senator Joe. Senator Joe, who is like that with Mayor Freddie, comes pretty close to saying who will be the president. Perhaps they are a little wary of Martin's independence.

"Re-election of President John I. Fitzgerald would establish a precedent of succession, but I hear Mayor Freddie does not frown on this idea. Peter Murray has been doing some telephone campaigning on his own book and Bob Wilson is a possibility.

"Right now, I'll still string along with Martin but there may be a big change over night."

It is at this point that the man with the dented derby returns to the scene.

"Watch his fingers when he pours the rye, Senator," whispers Timmy. "It is like creeping up on the bat handle for choosies-sides in a scrub game . . . How are you, mister?"

"Friends one and all," begins the man in the dented derby, "for the measly price of one bar rye and one large ale, I will perform the most stupendous feat of the drinking age. I will drink both without swallowing one little swallow. Who will buy to see this feat?"

"Stranger," says The Senator, who wants to see the unadvertised finger-glass trick, "I will buy if you can do it."

So Timmy draws the ale and the man in the dented derby pours his rye, very quick like a flash, with his thumb and forefinger around the top of the glass and the rye spilling over them. He tips his head back, pours in the rye, follows with the ale and it all vanishes while we watch his Adam's apple, which does not even give a little wiggle. This is a very neat trick as everybody admits, and the man in the dented derby stays around.

• • •

Young's Hotel Deal Likely

"Timmy," says The Senator, "do not be surprised if the city buys old Young's Hotel like Governor Jim was planning to do for $700,000, back in 1933 when he was mayor. If you will recall, a very large yodel went up at that time and the deal was blocked. Now, I hear, the price has gone down and feelers are out.

"More city departments are moving from the courthouse into Young's and when the City Hall renovating starts, others will do the same. It is cheaper to buy Young's and move in than pay rent."

"Friend," says the man in the dented derby, addressing himself to The Senator, "I can see you are a man of keen discernment and appreciation. I make you an offer the like of which has not been heard on this or any other continent. For the price of another rye and another ale, I will combine those stupendous and colossal tricks, drinking both rye and ale without swallowing, then eating part of the whiskey glass."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "I will buy again for the edification of all concerned. Set them up. And while you are drawing the ale, perhaps it will interest you to hear that the Irish Democrats are preparing to make capital of a recent Worcester County speech by Judge Kenneth D. Johnson, and that Deputy Marshal Jimmy Byrne may resign to accept a state appointment."

By this time Timmy draws the ale and sets out the whiskey bottle and glass. Quick as a flash the man in the dented derby wraps thumb and finger around the top of the whiskey glass, fills this arrangement to the brim, tilts his head, opens his mouth, pours down the rye, pours down the ale and without a single wiggle of the Adam's apple, makes a gnash at the whiskey glass.

Suddenly the man in the dented derby lets out a very touching howl of anguish and we see there is blood on his mouth.

"Timmy," gasps The Senator, "an ambulance, quick! He has cut his throat with the glass."

"Senator," says Timmy, "do not alarm yourself. He has merely got his tricks mixed up and took a bite out of his thumb."

Own 'Death Ride' Story Told by Killer Repucci

ASKED POLICE FOR NIGHT'S LODGING

The Boston Evening American relates herewith the alleged personal story of Antonio Repucci, escaped state prison convict, captured in Rhode Island after 10 days of freedom.

Sergeant James J. Crowley and Special Officers Andrew J. Mullen, J. Fred Hart and Daniel F. Donovan, his captors, said Repucci told them the story as he was brought from Providence to Boston under heavy guard.

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

"It's a good thing for you guys that I didn't have a gun. When I made that break from the guard I didn't intend to commit any murder.

"But after I got away and after I read in the papers that Doucette was dead I tried everywhere I could to get hold of a gun to be ready for what happened.

"When you stepped up to me with that gun you probably noticed that I was slow in putting the hands up.

"Well, I was just trying to figure out a way to get a hold of that rod and turn it on you. If I had a gun or if I could have gotten yours you would be pushing up the daisies in a couple of days.

"I was going to grab the gun but then I saw there were too many of you guys around and I knew it was no use so I put up my hands."

"While I was in the cell with Guarnelli over in the Dedham jail I began to think that ten years was a long, long time to stay in that prison.

"So I put the proposition up to Guarnelli. I said to him what do you say about making for a break. I said to him wouldn't you like to be out for Christmas?

"He said, 'how are you going to do it?' I said we'll wait until we get back into Boston and when we are in the cab I said one of us would jump the guard and knock him cold.

'Guarnelli didn't go for it at first and then said: 'I think we could make the break at that. There's a lot of traffic at this time of the year and we ought to make it.

"Right then we began to make arrangements for the break. It was agreed that the one of us who had his arm free would be the one to jump the guard.

"There was no sign of what we planned to do while we rode in on the train to the South Station. We got off the train and stepped into the cab.

"When the cab went down Atlantic avenue near Commercial street I noticed it was pretty dark there. I watched Guarnelli and he gave me the signal.

"My left hand was free and the guard's right hand was free. Guarnelli was handcuffed between us, his left wrist to my right, and his right wrist to Doucette's left.

"I said something to direct the guard's attention out the window, and then I swung on him, with my left, behind his ear. I thought he would go to sleep for a while, but he started to struggle.

"I hit him five more times and got on top of him. Guarnelli got the key out of the guard's pocket while I fished for his gun.

"Guarnelli unlocked the cuff that hitched him to the guard but I couldn't find the guard's gun. Then Doucette pulled the gun himself and let go at us. The bullet went right by my cheek, so close I could feel the powder burns.

"For a second I thought he had me. I kept fighting and got the gun away from him.

"The cab driver had stopped once, but we yelled to him to keep going. Guarnelli and I jumped out of the cab. Guarnelli asked for the gun and I gave it to him.

"The guard came after us. I knocked him down, but he got up again. He had me by the necktie and clothes. Then Guarnelli told him he'd get it if he didn't quit. The guard kept struggling and Guarnelli let him have it.

"Guarnelli and I couldn't get free from each other. He had dropped the key. We saw the cab driver go into a gas station and jump out of the cab.

"We ran up and got into the front seat and drove it away. We went around into Hanover street and left it and ran into an alley

"I picked up a brick out of the sidewalk and I told Guarnelli to hammer the cuffs off me first and that I would hammer them off him after that.

"When the cuffs were off we walked over to a sewer and dropped them down it.

"Then I said to Guarnelli, 'we will have to separate for a while because the cops will grab us if we stick together. We may meet again some day, good luck to you.'

"Guarnelli said, 'That's all right with me, good luck to you.' That was the last time I saw Guarnelli.

"I left the alley and walked out through the market district and went up to the home of a friend in the South End. He nearly dropped dead when he saw me.

"I told him the story and I said I needed some money. He gave me a dollar bill and said that was all he had.

"From there I went to Chelsea to an apartment where I spent the first night with a friend. I tried to get some more money from him, but he didn't have any.

"I couldn't get any money. Every time anyone I knew happened to see me they ducked me. Those I approached told me I was no one to be seen with and hurried away.

"Well, I got up the next morning and I went over near the Tidewater Oil Co. to see a fellow who owed me ten dollars, but I didn't see him. I stayed in Chelsea another night, sleeping in a hallway, and then I started for New Hampshire.

"I was going up to Newton, but I got a tip that you fellows were up there waiting for me when I reached Lawrence so I turned back.

"Then I made my way to Franklin on Christmas day. I hadn't eaten and I had a dime left from three dollars that a fellow in Chelsea gave me. I bought ten cents worth of candy with that. That was my Christmas dinner.

"When I reached Franklin I went to the home of a relative, but he told me to get away. He said he didn't want to have anything to do with me.

Slept in Hen Coop

"Well, Christmas night I slept in a hen coop and when I woke up I went down to the center of Franklin and hung around for awhile and I met those fellows that were locked up out there yesterday.

"They didn't have any idea who I was. They thought I was in town looking for work and they helped me out a little. I told them I was trying to get to New York.

"One night I wanted to get a room where it was warm so with a friend I went down into the police station there and he asked the officer where we could get a room.

"I saw my picture on a circular hanging up in the police station. The man in the station couldn't get a look at me because I pretended that I was cold and I kept my collar up and I kept standing behind the fellow who was with me.

"The next few days and nights I hung around Franklin, Wrentham, Milford and Attleboro, sleeping in barns, and abandoned farm houses for the night.

Wanted Gun

"One night I went down to Attleboro to a movie and another night I went over to Milford to a dance.

"I didn't eat hardly anything. I kept my eyes out for the police and ducked away several times when I saw one coming. Several times a police officer in one of the towns was close enough to reach out and grab me.

"I was anxious to get a gun and several times I asked friends to get one. I figured that I was in so deep that I might as well shoot it out with the cops.

"If I had one today I would have shot it out with you.

"Several times, at least five times, I saw spots where I could have walked in with a gun and gotten away with it, but as I said I didn't have the gun.

"I wanted to try a couple of breaks, too, but I didn't have my tools with me.

"After hanging around Franklin and the neighboring towns for a week I decided to try to start out for New York.

"I got into Providence and hung around the truck transfer station trying to get acquainted with one of the drivers of a through truck.

"This morning I got up and went over to the truck station and got on one. I rode out about 26 miles from Providence and the driver told me that he was not going through. He told me to go back to Providence and start out again and that is what I did.

"I was back there about a half hour waiting for another truck. I decided to change my stockings and that is when you fellows caugh up with me."

ANTHONY REPUCCI

Blames His Pal in Slaying

LINDYS QUIT HOTEL, MOTOR TO WALES

Liverpool, Jan. 3 (INS)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and their three-year-old son, Jon, left Liverpool secretly today apparently en route to the home of Mrs. Lindbergh's brother-in-law, Aubrey Morgan, in Wales.

According to C. Pittolo, manager of the Adelphi Hotel here, where the Lindberghs spent four days in seclusion after arriving from the United States, the family departed with Morgan in his car.

Morgan previously was registered at the hotel, it was disclosed.

Concealing every movement they made, the Lindberghs left by the servants' elevator and the back door.

Pittolo, revealing he had suggested Lindbergh give an interview to the press, said the flier's reply to this was:

"I'd rather not."

Pittolo described Lindbergh as the most reticent guest he had ever had at the hotel, which on occasions has entertained royalty.

A checkup failed to disclose their departure from Liverpool by either train or airplane, and it was presumed they were motoring to their secret destination.

The International News Service correspondent at Cardiff, Wales, reported the Lindberghs were expected there some time tomorrow. It was understood they planned a leisurely motor trip from Liverpool.

In Cardiff it was understood arrangements had been completed for the Lindberghs to spend a week or possibly a fortnight in the Morgan home in Llandaff, near Cardiff. Morgan is the widower of the late Elizabeth Morrow Morgan, sister of Mrs. Lindbergh.

The little family left in a rush, piling into an automobile which was waiting at the hotel's rear door. Apparently so great was Colonel Lindbergh's hurry to get away secretly that he forgot to tip the hotel staff.

At any rate, the servants declared they had received no gratuities whatever from the Lindberghs. They also revealed that none of them had seen any of the Lindberghs once during their four-day stay here.

The staff termed the Lindberghs "the phantom guests." Jacques, their waiter, said he served all the Lindberghs' meals, but had to do it without being allowed to see them.

THREE CITIES COMBED FOR GUARNELLI IN NEW HUNT

immediately and taken by Deputy Warden Frank Graves to a cell in the Cherry Hill block.

He will be given the regular prison food, but will not be allowed to mingle with other prisoners either at work or recreation.

FACES TRIAL

Punishment for his escape will be left with the courts, where eventually he will be tried, either alone or with Guarnelli, for alleged first degree murder of Walter Doucette, the guard.

Police officials insisted that they had received no information from Repucci as to the whereabouts of Guarnelli.

They said that the new hunt for the prisoner was begun as a result of a tip from an outside source.

They admitted, however, that Repucci had repeatedly warned them that he did not believe that Guarnelli would allow the police to take him without a battle.

CARRIES GUN

Repucci, they admitted, had told them that Guarnelli was carrying a gun and that when he saw him last a few minutes after the murder of Walter Doucette, the prison guard, that he had told him:

"No cop will ever take me without a battle."

Reupcci was arrested at gun point by Sergeant James J. Crowley and Special Officers Andrew Mellen, J. Fred Hart and Daniel F. Donovan and a squad of Providence police officers as he sat on the running board of a truck to change his stockings.

The arrest of Repucci was the culmination of a 10-day search by the four North End officers who had worked day and night running down clues in New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

The search for Repucci was brought to an end when Special Officer Mellen, walking with his associates on the detail, happened to see their prey walking down the alley to the truck.

Repucci was a defiant prisoner as he stepped from his cell to begin a trip to headquarters today—the first preliminary step in the direction of the electric chair.

To his police guards he cursed his stupidity in allowing himself to be taken a prisoner by the police.

He cursed the fact that he had not had an opportunity to murder an Everett police official, Lieutenant Jesse C. Killion, whose investigation brought a ten-year prison sentence to Guarnelli and himself.

"I wish he was the cop who came up and tried to take me. I would have murdered him. I wouldn't mind going to the chair for killing him," he told his captors.

"Your Name, Please!"

Modern Woman Still Touchy On Age, Police Listers Find

MISS ALICE LaROCQUE OFFICER MULVEY

"Please don't rise," says Officer Mulvey as he lists Miss Alice LaRocque, of 2 Anderson place, in the living room of her apartment. If your name hasn't been taken yet, it will be soon.

OFFICER MULVEY

MISS ANNE POLLACK MRS. SONIA PAEFF

Police listing stops for neither time or tide or permanent waves. Officer Mulvey walked right into the Ann Pollack Beauty Shop on Anderson street and listed Miss Pollack and her customer, Mrs. Sonia Paeff, of 6 Pinckey street.

OFFICER MULVEY MRS. LILLIAN MONTMONEY

Cheerfully answering the politely put questions of Officer Mulvey is Mrs. Lillian Montmoney as she stands in the doorway of her home at 40 Anderson street, Beacon Hill. "And your age, please?" asks Officer Mulvey, always a bit embarrassed at this necessary question.

MRS. GERARD J. CASSEDY OFFICER MULVEY

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

MRS. WILLIAM R. BASCOM

Patrolman Thomas H. Mulvey, of Division two, thought he was seeing double when he came to list the occupants of 14 Anderson street, Beacon Hill, but twins Mrs. Gerard J. Cassedy and Mrs. William R. Bascom reassured him. They are both 22. And we don't even know the name of the dog.

GIRLS TELL ALL ELSE FREELY

By PEGGY DOYLE

Women are still old-fashioned about their right age but they have a new-fashioned reason for it.

Patrolman Thomas H. Mulvey of downtown Division 2 and approximately 1499 other police officers made that discovery yesterday when they began the annual police listing of Boston's adult population.

For the first time, under a new law, the question of nationality is being put as a means of checking Communistic activities with a view to deportation.

And do the gals mind it?

"Not at all, at all," answers Officer Mulvey.

"They'll tell you their name and all their nick-names.

"They'll give you their family-tree back to Adam and Eve, if you don't stop them.

"They'll admit their occupation waiting for a job since the bottom fell out of things.

They'll even name all their creditors and the amounts they owe them, although what that has to do with a police listing I've yet to learn.

List Gifts

"Why, some of them even started to list their Christmas gifts and their New Year's resolutions!

"But ask them their age, and do they go static!"

However, they all have an excellent reason, and a very modern, 1936 one it is, too, these twentieth century career women will tell the world.

"The time has come," each said, in substance, "when a woman cannot afford to give her right age, particularly when she's looking for a job.

"In this competitive age in which we're fortunate if we can keep our heads above water, youth gets the breaks and age takes the leavings, if any.

"With sweet girl graduates, by the hundreds, vying with the business and professional woman for her job, the woman of mature years faces an alarming situation when she finds herself out of work.

Look Young

"And so-o-o-o, it is virtually important when we career-women go job-hunting that we contrive to look as young as we feel and years less than the old family-Bible proves we are.

"Giving our right age would be disastrous. It's a common practise for us unemployed women to subtract from five to ten years, depending on what our mirror tells us that particular morning."

Not included in the foregoing category were Mrs. Gerard J. Cassedy and Mrs. William R. Bascom, who answered Officer Mulvey's ring at 14 Anderson street.

Twenty-two-year-old twins, they gave their ages almost before the question was out of the officer's mouth.

Another young woman who had no hesitation about adding up her years on earth was Mrs. Sonia Paeff, of 6 Pinckney street, Beacon Hill, who was having a little lily-gilding done by Ann Pollack, beauty parlor operator at 22 Anderson street, when Officer Mulvey popped in with his personal questions.

Willing to Tell

Miss Alice LaRocque, an attractive young miss who makes her home at 2 Anderson place, was another who gave her age of 25 years instantly, not to say eagerly. Miss LaRocque is an expert hairdresser who could do with a job nicely after three years of vainly seeking one.

Mrs. Lillian Montmoney, of 40 Anderson street, born in New Bedford not too many years ago, is a widow, and a right pert-looking one, too, but she'd just as soon not see her age staring out at her in the Boston Evening American.

No, she wouldn't tell us but she did give her age—and her right age—to the police-officer who explained to her and to all the other age-shy ladies that this information is strictly confidential and for voting and population statistics only.

'COME HOME, MAMA!'

'Babies Need You,' Father's Plea

A jobless young Lynn father made a desperate plea to police today to bring back his missing wife—"even if her love for him is dead."

Just for the sake of their three young children, the father begged.

The husband is James O'Donnell, 25, of Baldwin street, Lynn. His wife, Beatrice, 22, dropped from sight on Christmas morning.

Since that time, O'Donnell told police, he has had a heartbreaking task in attempting to fill a mother's role in the care of the children.

They are Virginia, 5; Neal, 3, and James, Jr., 1½ years old.

In his plea, O'Donnell said:

"I don't care about myself.

"But the kids are so unhappy. I wish she would come back.

"Oh, it was a nawful Christmas. I wish she might have stayed until after Christmas. The babies did nothing but cry all day. And they croy for her constantly now.

"I don't care about myself. It's just the kids."

Mrs. O'Donnell has light brown hair and is five feet, four inches tall.

Once before, O'Donnell said, his wife left home and stayed with friends. This time, he declared, none of her friends have seen her.

Frances Cove to Make Debut At Copley-Plaza Tonight

By BETTY ALDEN

"I LIKE ANY SONG that is worthy of notes," Frances Cove told us last winter when she was still a sub-deb and sang in the singing contest at the Spring Frolic which a group of debs gave for a charitable cause at the Barclay . . . and now, as a full fledged debutante with but a few short hours to wait for her own large coming out party at the Copley-Plaza this evening, the melodic popular songs of the day still hold her interest . . .

FRANCES COVE

The basic idea of this evening's supper dance was taken from one of the popular songs which Frannie sang at the Casino in Magnolia last summer—"June in January" . . . To be sure, it is only the 3rd of the month, but really January, and the June will be artificially recreated in the Copley-Plaza ballroom so that the whole affair will be an imitation of a moonlit garden party . . . A profusion of palms and large baskets of spring flowers will decorate the rooms and the supper tables will be arranged in a wide circle about the dance floor . . . probably so the music can go "round and round," but don't quote us on that . . .

The tables will be covered with yellow damask and lighted with bright green candles to match the debutante's costume which is a French model combining a black chiffon gown with a long green satin over jacket . . . The gown is made with a lace yoke and full pleated skirt, and the jacket is floor length with long tight sleeves and large brilliant buttons fastening it at the waistline . . .

Frannie is going to try a new stunt to enliven the program of a deb party and will conduct a sort of informal singing contest . . . The orchestra leader will choose, from among the dancers, girls who are particularly known for their vocal ability and will ask them to sing with the orchestra . . . Janice Miner, Betty Palmer, Frederica Sargent and Louisa Beane will undoubtedly be called upon and "mine hostess" will probably raise her voice in song also . . .

Frances is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Cove of Winchester and Nahant, and will be assisted in receiving this evening by her mother, whose gown for the occasion is of heavy cream colored metal cloth with brilliant clips at the neckline . . .

Before the dance the ushers and their dinner partners will dine at the Copley-Plaza . . . Robert Cushman of Winchester, a Dartmouth student, will be the head usher and his corp of assistants will include Paul Walton, Richard Sullivan and Harry Gibbey of Brookline . . . Arthur Rogers, Jr., Arthur A. Kidder, Jr., and Harold Estey, all of Winchester . . . John Taylor of Boston and Andrew Wingate of Arlington, N. J. . . .

Among the feminine guests at the ushers' dinner will be Sally Scudder, Janice Miner, Elizabeth Sexton, Barbara Fulton, and several out of town friends who are coming for the party . . .

Miss Cove is a graduate of the Brimmer School and this winter is studying at Erskine . . .

Elizabeth Bradley Honored

IT SEEMS THAT there are more ways than one for an officer to get shore leave from His Majesty's Navy in order to go home to visit his bride . . . All unintentionally, Lieutenant John B. G. Temple discovered one of them when a heavy sea almost washed him off the decks of H. M. S. Dragon a few weeks ago . . . He went back to his London home with a heavy case of grippe and now the careful nursing of his bride, the former Lorna Livermore of Boston, has him well on the road to recovery . . .

You will remember that Lorna Livermore was one of last June's brides who pledged her vows in Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel, and that she is a sister of Mrs. F. Murray Forbes, Jr. . . . Incidentally, their mother, Mrs. Charles Ridgeley of New York, the former Mrs. Harris Livermore, has been visiting Lorna in London . . .

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bradley are giving a small party this evening for their sub-debutante daughter, Elizabeth . . . The sub-deb's grandfather, Godfrey Lowell Cabot, in whose home the Bradleys live, will have a chance to view the doings of the younger generation and join in the fun . . .

Visiting Old Friends Here

A FORMER BEACON HILL society girl, Audrey Stanwood Karsner (Mrs. Howard T.) came on from Cleveland to visit her mother over New Year's and also to attend the coming out party of her cousin, Anne Whicher . . . Mrs. Karsner is the daughter of Mrs. Eben Caldwell Stanwood of Commonwealth avenue, the former Anne Whicher, namesake of debutante Anne, and she and her doctor husband have kept in touch with their Boston friends very well by coming East every summer to occupy their York Harbor place . . .

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Phineas Shaw Sprague and their youngsters are another Beacon Hill family whose names have swelled the large Boston contingent visiting around at the Northern skiing resorts during the vacation . . .

Chatty Notes of Society

MR. AND MRS. PHILIP SALTONSTALL of Boston were the guests at a recent luncheon given at Four Winds in the Mid-Ocean Colony at Hamilton, Bermuda, by Mrs. James J. Storrow. Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Conant of Boston are the house guests of Mrs. Storrow until they take up their residence at the Mid-Ocean Club.

MISS ANN M. SOULE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie M. Soule, was one of the Boston debutantes among the guests at the large coming out party which Count and Countess Alfonso P. Villa gave in the jade room of the Waldorf Astoria this week for their debutante daughter, Elena Villa. Miss Villa was also presented to society at a dance in Newport last summer.

HONEYMOON Takes Leaguer to Bermuda

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

LIEUTENANT VAN NAGELL MRS. VAN NAGELL

ONE OF SOCIETY'S late 1935 brides is now honeymooning on a southern cruise. Here you see Lieutenant J. R. Van Nagell, U. S. N., and his bride, the former Miss Rosamond Musgrave, aboard the liner Lady Somers at Bermuda. The couple were welcomed by many friends Lieutenant Van Nagell made when the U. S. S. Macdonough visited Bermuda on a shake-down cruise last October. Mrs. Van Nagell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Musgrave of Marlborough street.

Miss Beckert Is Bride

At a quiet candle lit ceremony, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eugene Beckert of Lynn on New Year's Eve, their daughter, Miss Ethel Spencer Beckert, became the bride of Mr. Leonard Dexter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ellsworth Dexter of Hanover, Mass.

Following the ceremony, a dinner was given for the bridal party at the General Glover Inn in Swampscott.

The bride attended the Lynnhoim School, the Art School of Boston University, the Boston Art Students League and is a member of the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority. Mr. Dexter prepared for college at Derby Academy and graduated from Boston University and the Harvard School of Business Administration.

After a short vacation in Bermuda, Mr. Dexter and his bride will return to Boston to make their home.

Lecture Series

Bellarmine Academy Announces List

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

WITH HOLIDAY excitement a thing of the past . . . the lecture season is definitely on.

Bellarmine Academy has planned an interesting series for the new year and the John Boyle O'Reilly Reading circle announces a group of three talks to be given at the regular monthly meetings of the club at the League House, 1 Arlington street.

"Catholics in America" is the title of the series and will be delivered by Rev. John B. Mullin, professor of education at Emmanuel College. Fr. Mullin has also lectured at the Catholic summer school at Cliff Haven, New York.

The group opens with the talk, "Catholics in Pre-Revolutionary Times" Wednesday evening at League House.

Bellarmine Weekly Talks

Educational and missionary is the motto of the Bellarmine Academy of Boston, which holds weekly talks at the Commonwealth Country Club. The series are as profitable as a liberal education and the subscription fees are donated to the Jamaica missions.

The Rev. Joseph Williams, S. J., opens the Wednesday morning group with "Psychic Phenomena of Jamaica." Morning coffee precedes the group lectures which are held promptly at 11 o'clock. Mrs. John F. Swift is hostess.

At the following meeting the Rev. Anthony J. MacCormack, S. J., will discuss "Genetics Viewed According to the Modern Concept of the Gene."

"The Government of the Church Through the Papal Congregation" is the subject of the Rev. Robert Hewitt's lecture, January 23. On the last Wednesday in January, the Rev. Carol Bernhardt will talk on "The Place on the Madonnas in Art."

February group opens with the discussion "The Problem of Fascism in Italy" by Rev. George E. Smith and February 12, Rev. Thomas B. Feeney, S. J., will lecture on "Padraic Pearse and the Irish Approach."

The Rev. Joseph Kelley will be guest speaker at the last February meeting. His topic is "The Communist Uprising in Spain."

March series include "Dante and Beatrice" by the Rev. William Murphy, S. J., March 4; "The Glory That Was Greece" to be discussed by the Rev. Robert Dyson S. J. and on March 18 the series closes with the lecture, "The Nationalization of Religion in Germany" by the Rev. Louis Sullivan, S. J.

Other committee members include Mrs. Frank D. Comerford, of Framingham, Mrs. Martin Hall, Ruth Connelly and Alice Counihan.

Transportation is in charge of Mrs. John A. Foley and Mrs. William St. George directs the membership committee.

An interesting array of the newest books have been selected by Mrs. John G. Downing, librarian for the academy and round table discussion is led weekly by Mrs. Edward McLaughlin.

Officers of the academy include Mrs. Joseph H. Shortell, president; Mrs. James F. Casey, vice-president; Alice Elizabeth Barry of Jamaica Plain, secretary; Mrs. Edward Walsh, Jr., treasurer, and Mrs. Thomas L. Walsh, recording secretary.

ANTI-WAR CONGRESS CHIEFS DENY RADICAL TREND

Cleveland, O., Jan. 3 (INS)—Long before the third Congress of the American League Against War and Fascism was scheduled to be called to order for its first session, this city reverberated today with charges of Communism, which brought denials from many league leaders.

As more than 4000 persons known as advocates of unpreparedness gathered for the opening session tonight, organized labor and patriotic leaders came forth with a statement branding the convention as "subversive."

The American Legion launched a bitter attack on the Congress leaders, branding the three-day session as "Communist-inspired," and accusing the leaders of affiliation with groups "lending themselves to the overthrow of our government."

CLAIM LEGION MEMBERS

Officials of the league replied that members of the American Legion also belong to the league, and that it has no aims other than the destruction of war and Fascism.

The statement of the Legion was made public under the name of Leo P. Doyle, commander of the Cuyahoga county council. It said the purpose of the congress was not to prevent all future wars, but only to prevent "wars that might defeat Communistic purposes."

The Cuyahoga Council of the Army and Navy Union, through Max D. Gustin, chief national deputy, also attacked the Congress and announced it would watch the convention proceedings closely.

GEN. BUTLER TO SPEAK

A resolution was adopted in which the Union "indicted" the Congress and moved for the publication of 1,000,000 copies of its official organ, the Post, "to serve as the voice of loyal Americans in Cleveland by sounding a warning to unsuspecting Americans who may be tempted to join hands with paid propagandists who will, during the coming session of Congress, seek their financial and moral support."

Paul Reid, of New York, executive secretary of the league, replied to the Legion attack by declaring:

"This is a not unfamiliar cry from the legion. It is not at all disturbing. While we do not deny there are Communist delegates to the congress, it is perfectly absurd to say its leadership is Communistic."

The first charge that the league is a Communistic activity came from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who rebuked Cleveland labor representatives for participating in the congress.

Major-General Smedley D. Butler, retired marine commander, will be the principal speaker at tonight's session.

The Congress follows by only a few days the student convention at Columbus, O., where the American Student Union was created by the Communistic National Student League and the Socialistic Student League for Industrial Democracy to form a "United Front" of all campus groups seeking a "New Social Order."

The principal plank of the Union was the Oxford pledge not to support war declared by the United States.

130 CITIES PRESENT

Delegates from the Student Union arrived to participate in the Congress, which will have a youth section as well as sections for trade unions, farm groups, teachers and others of extremist views.

Angelo Herndon, Negro organizer for the Communistic party, "martyrized" after his sentence to a chain gang in Georgia for his activities, arrived with 600 delegates on a special train from New York.

With him is General Fang Chen-Wu, once rival of General Chiang Kai-Shek, commander of the Chinese army; Dr. Hansu Chan, editor of "China Today," and Leonardo Fernandez Sanchez, once imprisoned in Cuba as a revolutionary.

More than 130 cities are represented. Chicago is sending 200, headed by Professor Robert Lovett, of the University of Chicago, recently under fire of a legislative committee investigating radical activities on the campus there.

Bert Leech, West Coast organizer for the League Against War and Fascism, headed a delegation from California.

Mayor Harold H. Burton will greet the delegates. Others who will talk are Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner, the Rev. T. C. Douglas, member of the Canadian Labor Party, Bishop Edgar F. Blake, of the Michigan Methodist Church, Langston Hughes, Negro poet, State Senator C. W. Fine, of North Dakota, and Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild.

Stands by Jailed Husband

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)
MRS. DORIS STEVENS ASHWORTH

Framingham, Jan. 3—Mrs. Doris Stevens Ashworth, pretty 17-year-old blonde, has obtained a job at which she is working until her husband is released from jail, she revealed today.

The husband, Joseph Ashworth, 37, a widower, was taken off to jail on a bad check charge a few minutes after he and his bride arrived at her father's home here.

Ashworth is now serving a three-months' term in Milford jail for forgery, and faces a grand jury investigation on a similar charge when he gets out.

"Joe has made his bed, now let him lie in it," said Mrs. Ashworth today. "He has got to take the consequences of his acts, but, nevertheless, I will stick by him as I think any decent girl should.

"I love Joe and I know he loves me. I am not making any plans until he gets out, but I will stick by him through all his troubles.

"I will need money so that we can start out, so I have taken this job."

$100,000 Gift To Wife Told By Blakely

Clarence J. Blakely, 67-year-old manufacturer, who is serving a 30-day sentence for failing to pay his estranged wife $50 alimony a week, today testified he turned over more than $100,000 to her during their married life.

This sum was in addition to household expenses, the husband declared on the stand in Middlesex Probate Court during the hearing of the wife's petition for divorce.

His testimony was as follows:

Q—Did you give her sums of money?

A—Yes.

Q—How much?

A—More than $100,000.

Q—Was that in addition to household expenses? A—I always took care of the household expenses.

NO INSURANCE

In response to further questioning, Blakely declared he had been unable to obtain life insurance and gave her the money "for the protection of herself and the children."

He added he had in mind the education of their two children, Carl P., 20, now a sophomore at Holy Cross, and Joan, 17, a student at Boston University.

Blakely was given the 30-day sentence earlier this week when he admitted being $820 in arrears in payments to his wife.

Yesterday, the wife, Mrs. Margareet A. Blakely, of Medford, admitted ownership of securities valued at $54,000 and a yearly income of $2000. She denied, however, that sums totaling $100,000 had been given her by her husband.

BUILT UP WEALTH

Mrs. Blakely declared she had built up her wealth from $500 she had when she was married. She denied any part of teh money represented by the securiteis had been given her by Blakly.

George A. Wall, superintendent of Blakely's concern, the Atlantic Time Stamp Co. of Atlantic avenue, was an earlier witness today.

Loud talk and the noise of a falling chair were heard from Blakely's office when his wife once paid him a visit, Wall testified.

When Mrs. Blakely left, the husband emerged from the office with a broken chair, Wall said, and asked him to have it repaired.

Blakely's net income now amounts to about $50 a week, Wall said.

Auto Insurance Ordered Renewed

Companies which refuse insurance to autoists insured by them last year today were ordered by Francis J. DeCelles, insurance commissioner, to renew every policy they carried in 1935 or give reason for failure to do so.

More than 150 persons dropped by insurance compaines have asked Commissioner DeCelles for assistance.

The burden of proof is on the insurance companies, DeCelles said. If they do not want to underwrite a driver they must carry the case to the board of appeals, meanwhile permitting the operator to drive until the case is decided, he said.

HOPE FOR BRUNO TO CONFESS

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 3 (INS)—As the date of the scheduled execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann draws near all persons connected with the Lindbergh case appear to be growing increasingly tense. No day passes without its quota of predictions of one sort or another.

Today there was a report that a dramatic "death watch" attempt would be made to draw a confession from Hauptmann.

Governor Hoffman, according to the story, will go to prison on the night of the executions and sit beside a telephone in the warden's office.

Guards will start preparing Hauptmann for the "last mile."

"Only one man stands between you and death. That man is sitting at the other end of this telephone in the wardens office. Hauptmann, this is your final chance to live! Have you anything to say?"

In the event Hauptmann should then tell the Governor the complete story of the Lindbergh kidnaping, it is said, the executive would immediately issue a reprieve so the confession could be minutely checked.

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—Mrs. Ann Hauptmann today vehemently denied a published report that she had reserved passage on a steamship to Germany

N. E. Against Roosevelt 3 to 1 in Digest's Poll

New England is voting more than three to one against President Roosevelt in the latest report of the Literary Digest New Deal poll.

New England resentment against the administration is heaviest of any section of the country. Massachusetts leads the way with a mark of 80.08 per cent against the President's policies.

The nation at large votes slightly more than three to two against the New Deal, an increase of 1.96 points adverse to the President over last week's returns of 58.61.

60 PER CENT

Of the total of 1,370,774 votes tabulated on the question, "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?" there are shown 541,845 "yes" votes, or 39.53 per cent, to 828,929 "no" votes, or 60.47 per cent.

Massachusetts leads the percentages of New England against the New Deal. The rating of percentages against is as follows:

Connecticut	71.86
Maine	79.90
Massachusetts	80.08
New Hampshire	78.11
Rhode Island	76.30
Vermont	75.15

Just 12 states now continue to support the New Deal, and of these, all except Utah, are border or southern states. The states voting in favor are Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

339 ELECTORAL VOTES

The states which are shown voting against the administration represent 339 electoral votes, a little more than three-fourths of the Electoral College total of 531 votes.

In the 1932 election, President Roosevelt ctptured all states except Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

In a similar poll on the New Deal, conducted by the Digest in 1934, to the same names as nearly as possible, 61.15 per cent of the total voters favored the New Deal and Vermont was the only state to vote a majority against Roosevelt policies.

Three Found Dead In Gas-Filled Home

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—Elmer Willetts, 35-year-old prize-fighter, his wife, Katy, 31, and their seven-year-old daughter, Dolores, were found dead from gas fumes in their Brooklyn home today.

An ambulance surgeon said all had been dead at least two days.

Brixton Is on Hand For Lock-Box Opening

By ADELE GARRISON
CHAPTER 538

"DICKY!" I adjured softly, shaking my husband's shoulder. "Wake up! I think the guests have arrived."

As I expected, he returned his invariable answer when first called from sleep:

"Ye-ah? What time is it?"

That he is always sound asleep when he utters the words, I am as sure as I am that he is registering a sub-conscious attempt to delay matters. But I knew the most time-honored procedure and proceeded to put it into action. I shook his shoulder again, this time more vigorously, and taking hold of his hair, pulled it gently, but determinedly.

His eyes opened wide at that, and his forehead wrinkled into a scowl.

"What in the seven hinges of—" he began crossly, and then, as usual, set up a defense mechanism.

"There you go again, pulling that archaic stunt when all you need to do is speak my name. I haven't been really asleep."

LIKE A LITTLE BOY

With the wisdom engendered by countless similar experiences, I did not tell him of my first futile effort to rouse him. Instead I smiled at him disarmingly.

"Sorry if I was too strenuous," I told him, "but I think the travelers have arrived."

He sprang to his feet, and stretched, shaking his head and running an impatient hand through his hair. The gestures were so characteristic, so familiar that I could not repress an amused laugh, which I was sure, however, would not disturb him at this stage.

"Think you're smart don't you?" he said with a perfect imitation of Junior in one of his arguments with Roderick.

"I won't if you don't get ready to go down to greet your guest," I retorted. "I don't want to to go down without you."

"You bet your sweet life you won't go down without me!" he said with rough tenderness. "I'm not going to have you fainting on the stairs."

"Do I look as if I were going to faint on the stairs?" I challenged him.

"He gave me a swift, appraising look.

GUEST OF HONOR

"You look like a million dollars," he told me with satisfactory promptness, "but that doesn't mean you're going to be let stand without hitching. Remember your promise! Old Lil is hostess tonight, and you're to be a guest of honor and worry about nothing."

"And, in the meantime, our real guest of honor, Mrs. Barnes, is cooling her heels—"

"Your error," he gibed as he moved swiftly to the door. "She's probably warming them. But I'll be back in 'two jerks of leetle sheep's tail'."

The door closed on his promise, made in Katie's familiar phrasing, and when it opened, less than five minutes later, it was a sartorially perfect gentleman who offered his arm for my descent to the living room.

Marion spied me first, and, dashing up to me, threw her arms around me warmly.

"Oh! Auntie Madge!" she exclaimed anxiously, but keeping her voice down and giving a wary look toward the library where Lee Chow lay so critically ill. "They say you've been ill. Are you sure you're all right?"

BRIXTON'S CURIOSITY

"Of course," I returned laughing and kissing her. They've been alarming you unduly."

"They've been alarming me all right," she told me with another hug, and then Lillian, with Mrs. Barnes in tow, touched her on the arm.

"Move over, wench, and make room for your betters," she said with the tender special smile she always has for this idolized, winsome daughter of hers.

Marion turned to Mrs. Barnes appealingly.

"You hear the names she calls me?" she said. "I'm glad you're here to see the treatment I get. I'm such a misunderstood child!"

Mrs. Barnes looked after the girl who, I strongly suspected, was her favorite pupil.

"Such a bonnie lass!" she said, even as her glance came back to me and we clasped hands. "It is so good of you to ask me to be present at the opening of that mysterious box."

"Greetings, Madame Graham!" Samuel Brixton boomed, shouldering his way into our group—I saw that Helena was engaged with my father and my mother-in-law further down the room—"I couldn't help overhearing those intriguing word 'mysterious box.' When do we get a sight of it?"

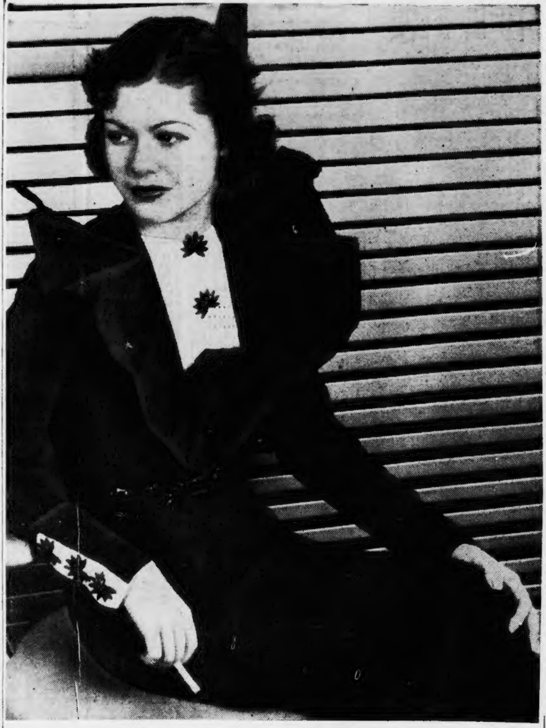
Hint of Spring in Frocks



By ANNICE BRINK

IF IT'S a little jacket frock that catches your fancy, count yourself as a fashion-wise girl, for when spring comes along you'll doff the heavy top layer, add fresh gloves, bag and shoes and have the effect of a brand-new spring ensemble. Coxcombs decorate the frock above and a coxcomb inspired the stiffened grosgrain collar that frames the head and shoulders on a slender black frock. The coxcombs continue on belt and cuffs. Moderately priced frocks from a Boston shop. Miss Jeanette Walden of Milton models for us. For shopping information on this frock, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

Martha Lee Chat

Cheese Versatile in Meal Planning

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

Cheese is about as versatile a food as we can find.

It can be most faithful as a staple for souffles and sauce, or it can be just as frivolous in salads, sandwiches, and cakes, as any of its unique varieties can make it.

Many a chef or hostess has learned that Roquefort, Camembert, Brie, Liederkranz, Swiss, American and the lowly cottage cheese can raise the taste of their salads to new holiday heights and just as successfully lift the faces of the old and familiar sandwiches.

One of the advocates is Miss Abby Marlatt, who, in the food laboratories at the University of Wisconsin, is ever seeking new ways to make our every day dishes still more nutritious and appetizing. She finds many of the foreign types of cheese are, for variety's sake, just the food to add for interest, and she reminds us that most, if not all, of these foreign cheeses are made here at home.

ROQUEFORT RECIPES

Best known, of course, is Roquefort, because of its streaked green coloring which gives the cheese a marbled appearance.

Mixed with a three-ounce package of cream cheese, two teaspoons of cream, and salt to taste, 1½ ounces of Roquefort are just the stuffing for celery stalks or endive. Two teaspoons of finely chopped parsley and a dash of paprika make the needed garnish.

Most people know Roquefort cheese for the fine salad dressing it makes when added to French dressing along with horseradish or celery and grated onion, but there are those who like it even better taken on top of hot toast points, along with olives and pickles. Canape is the right name for these open faced party sandwiches. A four-ounce supply of Roquefort cheese, plus four tablespoons of butter, ⅛ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika will be enough for ten of them.

Cream the cheese and butter, working with a fork. Season with salt and paprika and spread on rounds of buttered toast. Make a border of stuffed olives.

VERSATILITY

Roquefort cheese is a leading member of the cheese tray and is usually best uncooked. But sometime, suggests Miss Marlatt, try mixing a bit of it with stuffed baked potato just to pep up the stuffing; or fix it with Hollandaise sauce to serve over broccoli.

Before deciding that the cheese tray is the only place for Brie, Liederkranz, Edam and Parmesan cheese, give them a chance to show their personality. Say ½ cup of grated Parmesan cheese, for instance, mixed with chopped celery and finely chopped nuts plus French dressing. Use it over your favorite vegetable salad.

If you like pumpernickel, that favored bread of the German folk, you will like Liederkranz with it. This is the cheese which belongs solely to American cheese makers. It is soft and has a distinctive tang which makes it excellent as a sandwich cheese, or spread on thin crackers or slices of toast. To serve it with pumpernickel, add two teaspoons of lemon juice slowly and blend to a smooth paste. Fold in two tablespoons minced watercress and spread on fingers of pumpernickel. Garnish each with a row of watercress leaves.

Anchovies, those tasty round morsels of fish, add the last word in elegance to crackers and sandwiches when mixed with Brie cheese. Mash four ounces of this cheese with a fork until smooth and soft. Place a small mound of cheese in the center of a square salted cracker. Make a depression in the cheese on each cracker and place a rolled anchovy in the center.

SALAD DRESSING

Swiss cheese scores best when dry and grated into salad dressings along with chopped stuffed olives. That is, if you wouldn't rather eat it "as is" along with rye bread and mustard.

Camembert, so soft and mild, is one of the most popular dessert cheeses. Try it along with tart apples and pears, or maybe fruit punch if you like. In fact, any kind of cheese goes well with fruit drinks.

For general utility there is nothing like the common cheddar and cottage cheese. They are equally capable in gay desserts and appetizers, or in everyday dishes and short order sandwiches. So if you have become attached to the old recipes tuck them away and try these new suggestions.

To meet a festive occasion, combine cream cheese with caviar and spread the mixture on top of crisp crackers or little cocktail biscuits.

Or cut the ends from crisp dinner rolls, hollow out the centers. Blend cream cheese with a tasty India relish, stuff into the rolls and chill until mealtime. Slice in thin slices and serve with a fruit drink or cocoa.

Come to think of it, cream cheese is one of the best ingredients for double-deck sandwiches, For example, combine marmalade and chopped nuts to put between the whole wheat and white bread slices, and put a mixture of cream cheese and chopped sweet pickled watermelon rinds between the white and raisin bread slices. Cucumber rings can be substituted for watermelon pickles.

Beeckman ON GOOD Manners

GIFT FOR YOUNG MAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please advise me as to what would be the right gift for a man who has done many favors for me? I wish to give him a birthday gift. He will be 18 and I am 20 years of age. M.

You would probably want this gift to be a very special one, a consequential one, and I suggest a handsome wallet, maybe a black leather one with gold corners and with an attached gold oblong or square containing his initials.

Or, if this is too much for the budget, one without gold corners and with the name or initials stamped in gold or silver on the inside flap.

If he's a "reading gentleman" he'll appreciate a well-chosen book or several books or perhaps a subscription to a book-club for the year.

One or two evening handkerchiefs—sheer, all-white linen ones embroidered in white with initials or monogram—are always a welcome gift to a man. Or handkerchiefs for day-wear if you prefer.

If you know he hasn't a set, fountain pen and pencil, this too is an excellent gift, with the facsimile of his signature applied in gilt or silver.

(If you send this gift, make it definite in the shop where you buy it that the young man can exchange the pen point for another more suitable to his preference, if he cares to do so.)

A box of letter-paper is also a good gift, double-sheeted paper in half the box and single sheets in the other half.

And remember that the paper must be white or light gray or Scotch granite, and that it must be of generous size to be appropriate for a man's use.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How Long Does Infatuation Last?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year ago I heard my husband was keeping "steady" company with a married woman who has two children. They work in the same place and see each other every day.

We've been married 20 years, have two children nearly grown, and I love him as much as the day I married him.

I had a talk with him about this woman and he promised to break with her, but he hasn't done so yet, and more than a year has gone by. He tells me it takes time to break away from a woman. Does infatuation last that long? When I get real angry I threaten to go to her husband and tell him about this affair. My man says if I do this it will be the end of everything with us. I don't know what to do.

I've been working every day for eight years to make some extra money and help out at home.

A FAITHFUL WIFE.

The fact that you are financially independent and have been working for eight years should give you more power of choice than if you were dependent on your husband for your very bread and the roof over you.

It's heart-rending when a woman must suffer every indignity, because there are little children who must be considered and she has not the ability to earn a penny

When your husband tells you that it takes time to break off an affair, he is just stalling, and you might counter with, "I shall not contribute any more money to the upkeep of the home until this affair is broken off definitely."

In the meantime, do not let this tragedy consume your body and soul. Try and have interests outside the home. See what activities are open to you in your church or other clubs. Make companions of your children. Try and develop some initiative. Don't agonize over your husband, who is apparently very happy with his other woman.

CEILING ZERO

Thrilling Novel of the Air Mail

Novelized by LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE
From the Stage and Screen Play by Frank Wead
(A Cosmopolitan Picture to be released soon by Warner Bros.)

SYNOPSIS

Pretty Tommy Thomas, going to the Newark airport to seek a job as airline hostess, meets girl-shy Tay Lawson, expert aviator. They become interested in each other at once. Tommy gets a job from Jake Lee, new Division Superintendent. Tex Clark, mail flyer there, and Dizzy Davis, who comes on from Denver to congratulate Jake on his promotion, have a happy reunion. They are veteran flyers, with overseas service. The younger generation of flyers are mistaken when they think them too old for this. Because of an emergency, Tommy is sent with a passenger plane without training. Up 4000 feet, Tommy sees a demented woman trying to unfasten a side door. Tommy begins to struggle with her.

(Copyright, 1935, Warner Brothers, Inc.

CHAPTER IV

"Get out here?" Tommy cried, trying to hold the woman's arm. "You can't do that. You are thousands of feet up in the air."

"Don't tell me my business, you little devil! I am going to get out here and walk back."

Then Tommy knew that the woman was crazed. She shouldn't have appeared to oppose her at all.

"Oh, I see, I didn't understand. Well now, that's too bad, but you will have to wait a few minutes. There isn't—I mean, there is too much air pressure now to open the door. Sit down and I'll help you when it is time."

"I wouldn't trust you—I never trust anyone in uniform. A door can open any time—get away or I'll—"

Tommy tried a trick she learned in a gymnasium, she pinned the woman's arms back locking her own through the woman's elbows.

Tay and Tommy talk things over.

The woman kicked and screamed. A woman turned then, got up and rushed to them.

"Here, here, Olive, this isn't the place. I have a drink for you," she said.

Together they got the woman into a seat. Tommy helped to hold her. The woman gave her a drink of some colorless liquid. Within five minutes the unfortunate woman was staring drowsily out of the window, seeing nothing.

The return trip was uneventful. Tommy was greatly encouraged. If anything happened that she couldn't keep her new job it would break her heart.

It was the next day that Jake sent over for Tommy. She met Tay on the way over as he was getting off a field truck with some materials for his work.

"Oh Tay," she cried, "I'm scared."

"Somebody say 'Boo' at you?"

"Mr. Lee has sent for me—what do you suppose I've done?"

"Go and ask him. You haven't done much—did you give any of those passengers poison in their tea?"

"You're a great help."

"You are a baby doll! So there! Don't worry, Tommy. March in to Mr. Lee and find out. Flyers can't turn their backs to anything."

Tommy went over to the office. Jake was reading a teletype slip. When he glanced up at her she said, "Yes, sir, Mr. Lee."

"Oh, Tommy Thomas, eh? Say, when there is anything to report—report it."

"Yes sir."

"What about the crazy woman who tried to walk out on you?"

"Oh! Why—did I have to report that?"

"You have to report everything." He stopped being stern and smiled at her. "Tommy, of course, you didn't know. Mrs. Barnes didn't tell you. You didn't have the least training. Matthews reported it. I think you'll make a mighty valuable hostess. You thought she could open that door, didn't you?"

"Yes sir—I—I don't know much about the big passenger planes. I suppose it was dumb of me—"

"It was nervy, and clever. We'll give you some training now, and if I can help you, say the word."

"Oh boy! Gee, you're a swell guy—I—I—mean, thank you so much, Mr. Lee."

Tommy's Chance

"Lawson says you want to learn to fly?"

"More than anything else, Mr. Lee."

"Why?"

"It's a real profession. I can train others, I can take routes—make good money."

"Well, you'll get chances now and then to go up with some of the boys. Good luck to you, Tommy."

Tommy almost waltzed as she went out. She raced around back of the hangar where Tay's little shop was located and banged on the door.

"Get out!" Tay shouted.

"Boo! You big brute!" she shrilled at him, through the keyhole

"Hey—wait, Tommy!"

He ran and opened the door.

"Thought it was some snoopers, Tommy. Did Lee beat you up?"

"He's wonderful, Tay—he was awful nice. Sort off bawled me out about reports, then grinned at me and said he knew no one had told me. He says I may go up and learn to fly, when I get a chance. That means you."

"Sure. Say, I'm up to my neck now. How about six for eats? Ever been to Mama Gini's?"

"No."

"You're going tonight. I'll come and get you."

He called at Mrs. Barnes' office at six. Tommy eyed him with surprise, and approval. He was an entirely different Tay Lawson when he was washed, shaved and wearing a navy blue suit with gray topcoat and hat.

Tay Proposes

He drove her over to Mama Gini's.

They had a corner table, practically hidden from the big room by a screen and a giant rubber plant. Leave it to Mama Gini to know where to seat a happy young couple.

Tay ordered, Tommy devoured, along with him, then they danced and went back for coffee and cognac.

"It's moonlight," Tay said when they went to his car. "The shortest way to New York is around over the Orange mountains and across to the Washington bridge."

"Right," Tommy agreed.

They parked somewhere in the Orange mountains.

"I'm going to kiss you, Tommy," Tay said.

"Don't talk so much," Tommy replied with a giggle that he smothered with a kiss as he held her in his arms.

"Tommy," he said, "chuck your hostess job—marry me, that's job enough for you."

CONTINUED TOMORROW

Quick work on Tay Lawson's part. Will Tommy agree to give up her intended career as a flyer to become Mrs. Tay Lawson?

When Wooden Play Looks Good

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When declarer is faced with a guess, the defenders should try their best to make him guess wrong. Wooden play will often leave declarer with no option but to play correctly.

An imaginative defender, however, can make declarer's worst line of play seem best.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

West	North	East
	♠ Q 10 5 ♡ K 8 4 ◇ A 4 2 ♣ K J 10 3
♠ K 7 4 ♡ 9 6 3 ◇ J 10 9 ♣ 9 8 6 4	North West — East South	♠ A 6 3 ♡ Q J 10 2 ◇ Q 8 7 3 ♣ Q 5
	♠ J 9 8 2 ♡ A 7 5 ◇ K 6 5 ♣ A 7 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

For want of anything better, West opened the Jack of diamonds. East played the eight, and declarer permitted the Jack to hold. The suit was continued, declarer winning with the King.

A low spade was taken by West's King and the nine of diamonds knocked out the Ace, East cleverly dropping the Queen on the trick.

The reason for this false-card was that East could count two spade tricks and two diamonds and could not see the setting trick unless South could be induced to take the club finesse into his hand.

Declarer continued with the Queen of spades, which East won and in accordance with his plan, he did not cash the last diamond, but returned the Queen of hearts.

Declarer was convinced that West had no more diamonds and thought that he could safely take the club finesse through West.

This, of course, was just what East had been waiting for, and when he won the Queen of clubs, he promptly cashed his diamond to set the contract.

Health

Fever Due to Body Ailment

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

FEVER IS not a disease. But it is an important symptom indicating some disturbances within the body.

The average, or "normal," temperature of the human body is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. It varies with the time of the day and is not quite the same in all parts of the body.

There may be as much as a degree's difference between the mouth and the rectal readings of the thermometer. The temperature is lowest in the morning and highest at the end of the day, or in the late afternoon.

There are various causes for fever. Elevation of temperature is frequently the result of some disturbance produced by germs. Sometimes it is brought about by a gastro-intestinal upset; this is particularly true of infants and young children.

MAY NOT BE SIGN

The degree of fever varies with the type of germ. In pneumonia, for example, it remains high and stays elevated until recovery begins. In tuberculosis the temperature may be below normal in the morning and high in the afternoon.

The presence of fever is not always a danger sign. Recently it has been shown that the existence of fever in certain infectious diseases is really a blessing. It helps to bring about recovery. But, of course, it is a symptom that should never be ignored.

It is well to be familiar with the symptoms of fever. Of course, its presence can always be determined by the use of a thermometer, a clinical thermometer, as it is called. But a thermometer is not always available and even if it is it is of little value unless one is acquainted with its use. It is advisable for every mother to know how to read a thermometer.

Usually the feverish child is listless, irritable and without appetite. As a rule, the skin is dry and hot, and the face flushed. Often very high fever is accompanied by delirium.

Whenever fever is present it is best to go to bed. A doctor should be consulted. He will prescribe such treatment as he thinks best to bring the fever down to normal. If the underlying condition is corrected the fever disappears of its own accord.

Radiance For Winter-Dry Skins

New Stimulant Restores Fresh Youthful Glow

By ARLINE GOULD

There's nothing which strikes deeper terror into a woman's heart than the sad realization that her skin is no longer young and flawless.

However, in these days of icy breezes and sub-zero readings, it's rare indeed to find a complexion which is in the pink of condition—regardless of age or an inherently lovely texture.

POSED BY BETTY GRABLE

So, if your complexion is at low-ebb, let us tell you of a brand-new lotion that is comparable to a professional prescription. It is actually the prescription of a well-known skin specialist, and even if you were willing to spend the money necessary for personal consultation, you could get no finer treatment for your skin.

This lotion is not just another combination of cosmetics, for it actually amounts to professional treatment by a physician specializing in skin problems, and no matter whether your skin is definitely out of condition or is no longer smooth and flawless you will benefit by its amazing treatment.

It is for the busy woman who hasn't time for a lengthy beauty ritual, or for the one who desires utmost simplicity and scientific advice. Used regularly and faithfully during the winter months, nothing you can do to your skin in the way of ordinary exposure (such as over-use of make-up, etc.) can injure it.

All you do is to pat this lotion over the entire face and throat, using the finger tips or small cotton pad. Allow the lotion to be partially absorbed, then remove surplus with tissue or cotton pad.

It leaves the skin sterilely cleansed of every trace of imbedded dirt, dead tissue, coagulated oil, and even germs. It also stimulates a normal deep-seated circulation. The effect of a few treatments is like nothing you have ever seen before.

If you would care to learn the name of this lotion which is the actual prescription of a famous California skin specialist, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question—Is castor oil good for dry hair? Mine is excessively dry and is beginning to fall out. I have heard of using castor oil for this purpose, but hesitated about applying it, not knowing whether it was proper treatment or not. If so, will you please tell me how it is applied. Also give me the name of some good scalp pomade to help promote the growth of hair.

Answer—In the treatment of dry hair an excellent medium is made by combining one ounce of castor oil and one ounce of alcohol. The purpose of the alcohol is to thin the oil and to create warmth in the scalp. Heat the mixture slightly, trickle it onto the scalp with a large medicine dropper. Spread out the fingers and thumbs and give the scalp a good mauling. Let the tonic remain on over night. Next morning begin the shampoo with a rousing hot spraying, using soap generously. After the hair is dry rub a little brilliantine into the scalp.

LANDON HAILED

'Most Outstanding' in Party

San Francisco, Jan. 3 (US)—Announcement of organization of the Landon Republican League of California brought many requests for enrollment.

President Eugene L. Pfaeffle emphasized the League's vote was unanimous to support Governor Landon of Kansas, for the Republican nomination for president, the resolution said

"Governor Alf M. Landon is an outstanding, plain, sincere, earnest, straight-forward American, of wonderful American family from the heart of America, whose clean, efficient and economic administration of our country, all citizens are agreed, is needed to preserve its integrity.

"Governor Landon is the outstanding Republican, best fitted to solve the problems confronting our country."

Governor Landon, replying to a message sent him by De Martini, announcing the new organization, wrote

"While I am not at this time a candidate, and have no organization, such letters as yours are, of course, pleasing. We have not been encouraging the organization of Landon for president clubs and all those already organized have been entirely voluntary."

Due for Zionist Concert

MME. LEWISOHN MISS RACHELLE SHUBON
DR. LUDWIG LEWISOHN

Dr. Ludwig Lewisohn, eminent Jewish writer, who will lecture Sunday afternoon at the Hotel Statler. Mrs. Lewisohn, soprano, will also give a joint concert of songs from composers forbidden in Germany, accompanied by Miss Rachelle Shubow.

COMMUNISM 'BALONEY'

Addles Minds, Says Lewisohn

Communism has addled many good American minds and its disciples eventually abandon all reason, Ludwig Lewisohn, internationally known writer, said today on his arrival here to attend a concert to be given by his wife under the auspices of the Zionist organization of America.

Residents of Berlin for 10 years, the Lewisohns returned to this country two years ago and have made their home in Burlington, Vt., the birthplace of Mrs. Lewisohn. During her residence abroad she sang in all the European capitals and was the first foreign singer invited by the Sorbonne to give a recital.

Discussing the persecution of Jews in Germany, Lewisohn said he keeps in constant communication with friends in that country and has learned that many prominent German liberals have recently become self-exiled.

"The decent people of Germany," he said, "are moving to Amsterdam and Paris and have set up colonies and even their own newspapers.

"Not only the Jews are being persecuted but many Germans who are recognized as liberals. Only recently the German author, Thomas Mann, probably the greatest writer in the world, was forced to leave his country. His son, too, was exiled because of his writings.

"The people of Germany are being reduced to complete slavery, the pagan brutality of the state having seized control of industry and all commercial activity. It is a desperate persecution of all the liberals in Germany and of all religions.

"It is a pity that so many promising young people in America are leaning toward Communistic teachings. Communism has addled many a good American mind.

"Like new-fangled religions it oftentimes makes fanatics of its followers and all reason is abandoned. It is amusing to hear these people refer to Marx and the wonder of his works.

"I read "Das Kapital"—the original Marx document and there is only one word I can think of to describe it—baloney."

After Mrs. Lewisohn's recital at the Hotel Statler next Sunday, Lewisohn will begin a lecture tour which will carry him through the principal cities of this country and Canada.

Benson Asks Seat With Democrats

Washington, Jan. 3 (INS)—Senator Elmer A. Benson, Minnesota's new Farmer-Laborite member of the Senate, created a mild furore among Senate officials today by requesting a seat on the Democratic side of the chamber.

The request was unprecedented. The other Minnesota member, Senator Shipstead, also a Farmer-Laborite, sits with the Republicans, as have all Farmer-Laborites in the past.

Britain to Dull 'Red' in Flag

London, Jan 3 (AP)—The imperial red of England's flag is to lose its ancient redness.

The change is a result of a government order substituting other dyes for those previously used to color the red bunting, in an attempt to save money.

The British color council refused to accept the resulting tint as red, saying it was merely dirty brown or rusty color.

Substitution of a synthetic dye for the brilliant but costly cochineal hitherto used was decided upon by an intergovernmental technical co-ordinating committee.

Vigorous protests were expected to rain upon a harassed Parliament.

Watertown Youth To Repay Girl $150

Charged with theft of $150 from his former sweetheart, William K. Johnstone, 23, of Pond street, Watertown, was given six months' suspended sentence today in Dedham District Court, on an understanding that he will repay the money.

Jannie A. Wombolat, a maid for a Needham family, charged Johnstone had borrowed the money on the promise to marry her.

Veteran Reporter Dies

Springfield, Jan. 3—James F. MacPhee, 66, veteran police reporter of the Springfield Evening Union, died suddenly today following an operation.

Not So Smart

Carroll, Ia., Jan. 3 (AP) — Police admitted it clever of Ed Hoehl to set an alarm clock for Phillip Redig family's church hour so he could rob the Redig home in peace.

But it wasn't so clever, they pointed out, for him to leave footprints in the snow between his house and Redig's.

Hoehl drew ten years.

ECCLES SLATED FOR FEDERAL RESERVE JOB

Washington, Jan. 3 (US)—Despite indignant protests by Democratic leaders, President Roosevelt plans to name Marriner S. Eccles to be chairman of the new Federal Reserve Board taking office February 1, it was learned definitely today.

A conference was held at the White House yesterday between President Roosevelt and David Stern, Philadelphia newspaperman, whose appointment by Eccles to be a class C director of the Philadelphia Reserve Bank has been vigorously denounced by Senate Democrats, headed by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia.

Senator Glass, father of the Federal Reserve System and himself a former Secretary of the Treasury, has served notice upon President Roosevelt he will fight confirmation of Eccles.

The Virginian, in a letter to a member of the present Federal Reserve Board, of which Eccles is the head, declared Eccles' fiscal policies and viewpoints "are utterly dangerous" to the solid banking structure of the nation.

CHANGES BY GLASS

Glass is understood to have charged in this letter

1 That Eccles and Stern are both advocates of "unsound government spending" and of extravagant [illegible] that "would plunge the government deeper into debt."

2—That Eccles has indicated he would not be dismayed if the national debt reached $97,000,000,000.

3—That Eccles' appointment of Stern indicates he is surrounding himself with impractical subordinates.

4—That Eccles and Stern are willing to throw overboard the "sound financial experiences" of the nation's banking structure the past 15 years.

NAMED MONTHS AGO

When Stern emerged from his conference with President Roosevelt, he said he knew that vigorous protests had been made against him He said:

"A lot of the Tory press have called me a radical on money policies. I feel I am not a radical."

He said he had not talked of his appointment to the President, adding

"I was appointed two months ago. It is over. There was no need to talk about it with him.

"The law required that neither a banker nor an owner of bank stock should be appointed to the position to which I was named."

Class C directors are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board.

Philadelphia bankers had submitted a list of 25 persons. Stern was proposed by Eccles and was appointed upon his insistence, it is reported.

5 Dead, 31 Hurt In Cuban Crash

Havana, Jan. 3 (AP)—Five persons died and 31 were injured, police officials announced today, in the collapse yesterday of an unoccupied two-story brick and stone building.

The discovery of the fifth body today in the ruins of the 60-year-old structure accounted for all persons previously missing. Hospital attaches announced they found at least three of the injured would die.

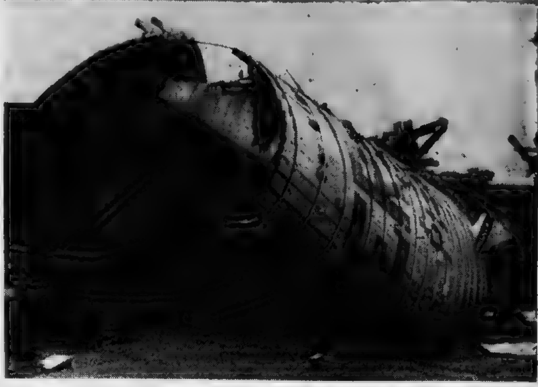
Huge Tower Tank Toppled by Ice and Wind



(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

This 30,000-gallon water tank, atop the Ivers and Pond piano plant in Cambridge, crashed through the roof today when a high wind toppled the ice-encased structure. It was reported new player pianos valued at $10,000 were ruined by water.

Goodwin Attacks Watt, Critic of Union Activities

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today turned on the American Federation of Labor "as now run," in reply to Robert J. Watt, secretary of the federation's state branch, who recently criticized Goodwin's activities in behalf of independent shoe unionists.

He said he agreed with a recent charge by Father Coughlin, radio priest, to the effect that the American Federation of Labor is a racket, "as now run."

"I don't blame Watt for fighting to get the shoe workers of Haverhill into his union," Goodwin said.

"There are about 6000 workers in Haverhill and the manufacturers are forcing them to join a union they do not want and pay 25 cents a week, or $13 per year, an aggregate of $78,000 per year.

"That is pretty good pickings.

AGREES WITH PRIEST

"I agree with Father Coughlin when he said that the American Federation of Labor is a racket as it is now run. Most of its affiliates are controlled by labor fakers who play with the bosses and sell out the workers. The greatest thing that can happen for labor would be for John Lewis to clean up the dirty mess.

"Unions are supposed to be voluntary associations of workers organized to bargain collectively with their employers. In Haverhill right now the manufacturers have made a contract with officers of the union before the union had any members and then workers were told that if they wanted to work they would have to join this union that they did not want.

"Mr. Watt and his associates are not going to get away with it because Haverhill workers, without help, legal, moral and financial aid, are going to pick their own union, handle their own affairs and spend their own money.

"Mr. Watt, is now getting $6000 a year working for the state and is still active as a secretary of the Massachusetts branch of the federation with another big salary.

"In these days, with so many workers on welfare or working for starvation wages or not working at all, he ought to have enough decency to quit one job or the other.

"It is against union principles to hold two jobs and gather in two salaries. So far as conditions in Brockton are concerned I am proud of them and, what is more important, so are the 14,000 members of our union.

Ship Traffic Jams, Call Police Boat

Automobile and steamer traffic were tied up for nearly an hour today by a breaking of the cable operating the Chelsea north drawbridge over the Mystic river at Broadway, Chelsea.

For the first time in history, the police boat Watchman was assigned to unsnarl a tangle of ocean traffic.

Nine vessels, including oil tankers, converged on the harbor side of the bridge awaiting the opening of the draw so they might proceed to berths up the Mystic.

Although the bridge was passable for motor and foot traffic, the gates were closed during attempts to open the draw. When the automobile tieup became bad, extending on one side into Charlestown, on the other nearly back to Chelsea square, the gates were opened.

Drawbridge engineers were sent from Boston city hall and temporary repairs were made.

NILES RESIGNS AS PWA AIDE

David K. Niles, assistant PWA administrator, today tendered his resignation, effective January 15, to State Administrator Arthur G. Rotch.

An air of mystery surrounded Niles' resignation, at least in his office, where the staff expressed surprise when they were told of the move. Niles' secretary further declared that the assistant director was in Washington and would not return until next Monday.

Rotch announced that Niles had accepted the PWA post on a temporary basis and had planned to quit four months ago, Rotch said.

"He originally agreed to come in and help until September 1, 1935. I have kept persuading him to stay since that time. That's all there is to the resignation."

Niles has been in charge of labor and personnel and will be succeeded by John J. McDonough, former state NRA administrator.

Roxbury Woman Burned to Death

Mrs. Ethel Izzard, 49, of 6 McLellan street, Roxbury, died today at City Hospital from burns received last night when a kerosene lamp exploded in her home.

In the explosion and fire which followed she suffered multiple second degree burns.

The fire, however, caused a damage of only $10.

One Cape Cod Clam Gives Meal to 24

Provincetown, Jan. 3 (INS)—Twenty-four persons—believe it or not—sat down at the home of John Sousa to a clam chowder made from a single bivalve measuring 32 by 16 inches and weighing 60 pounds.

The monster Cape Cod clam, it was said today by natives, resembled the species found in the Indian Ocean.

CHILDREN MAY STAY

U. S. Halt on Deportation Sought

New Bedford, Jan. 3—Deportation of the family of Mrs. Achiel Martens, 31, of Cedar Grove street, will be stayed several months, at least, if not permanently, immigration officials predicted here today.

John F. Mulcahey, head of the local immigration bureau, was making every effort today to keep Mrs. Martens, an American citizen, together with her six Canadian-born children. Through the operation of the immigration law the mother faces the loss of her family.

Immigration officials rushed a communication to the Department of Labor at Washington today, pointing out the case as "meritorious" and urging upon Washington officials the permanent staying of the deportation of the children.

All the children were brought here by Mrs. Martens after she married her present husband, following the death of her first husband, J. Clifford O'Brien, of Moncton, N. B.

When she married O'Brien she maintained her American citizenship, according to authorities. She became the wife of Martens in this city during a visit.

Informed that for $10 apiece, or a total of $60, the children could again be admitted to this country after they reached the Canadian border, Mrs. Martens told immigration officials that she had no money for the transportation and re-inclusion of her brood.

Big Tank Crashes Through Roof

A 30,000-gallon water tank, encased with tons of ice, was bowled over by the high wind today. It crashed through the roof of the six-story Ivers and Pond piano plant at Main and Albany streets, Cambridge.

Employes had not arrived for work at the time and nobody was injured, but it was estimated that about $10,000 worth of brand new player pianos, stored on the top floor, were ruined

Huge timbers were snapped like matchwood, and hundreds of panes of glass were shattered.

Firemen covered gaping holes in the roof to prevent additional damage by rain.

Loses Low Auto Tags, So Sues

The struggle for low number plates reached the Supreme Court stage today.

Nicholas W. Mathey of 541 Commonwealth avenue has had No. 518 for the past six years. He claims he complied with all the regulations necessary to get the same number this year.

But, according to Mathey, the registry gave him 36,518 and gave 518 to Charles E. Manion, superintendent of the State Public Works garage and formerly chauffeur for Governor Curley.

Mathey asks the Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus to compel Registrar Frank A. Goodwin to give him No. 518. He has refused to accept the higher number. Hearing will be held at a later date.

Constable in Envoy Row, Ousted Again

Elkton, Md., Jan. 3 (AP)—The Elkton town council today rescended the re-appointment of Clayton L. Ellison, constable who had been dismissed after the arrest of the Persian minister on a charge of speeding here.

The council reconsidered its action shortly after a member who declined to use his name had disclosed that Ellison had been rehired.

Another spokesman represented the council as feeling Ellison's reinstatement might cause further complications.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

I have received an interesting communication from Joseph Lee, Jr., who has been the chief mover in a plan to make our Metropolitan Park system more useful for general popular recreation, particularly on its waterways and more particularly in the winters. One of his interests is the problem of skating safety on the Charles River and ponds of some depth.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Last spring tests were made in conjunction with the American Red Cross. Some 16 L street Brownies were put through the ice near the Technology boathouse and different ways of pulling them out were tested.

Only a few days ago Mr. Lee was warned off the Charles River ice and arrested for skating in a forbidden area, although he asserted that he had thoroughly tested that region and could vouch for its being safe. Mr. Lee writes on the letterhead of the Massachusetts Committee to Further Outdoor Recreation.

1—Don't go near the ice. Stay ashore.

2—Go on shallow ice, like a flooded field, where it is only six inches thick if you do fall in.

If Ice Holds a Crowd It Will Hold You

3—Go where a crowd is already skating. If the ice will hold a hundred people, it will hold you. If it is cracking, you can see.

4—Keep near the shore,—unless you know it is stronger elsewhere. Even a weak person can break his way through cracking ice for five or ten yards, after he has fallen in.

5—Go skating in mid winter. Treacherous skating comes in autumn and spring.

6—Keep away from bridges where ice is warmed by the arch of the bridge and by currents.

7—Keep away from streams and brooks and springs that pour water into the ice.

8—Know the particular water where you skate.

9—Go with other fellows when skating, each with a stick, to pull the other out. Two fellows are just twice as safe as one.

10—If you are going alone on unknown ice, take a heavy stick or poker to break through the ice with. See how thick it is. Ice when it is new and transparent, or "black," will hold one person, if it is two inches thick.

Carry a Pole When Skating on Strange Ice

11—If you are skating alone on strange ice, carry a long, light pole like the bamboo poles that rugs come wrapped around, and use it across the ice in case you fall through.

12—If you fall in, climb out. If you have an overcoat with a button in the middle, you won't get out. The button will catch on the edge, just as you are wriggling onto safe ice.

13—If you can't climb out, after these efforts, even with your stick for support across the ice, because the ice keeps breaking under you, don't try to climb out. Feather-kick your legs out behind you till you are floating as flat as an angel, and then try to roll out. Get one leg and one arm over the edge of the ice, and try to roll out.

14—Remember you can rest by laying your hand on the edge of the ice, and not struggling. You can last about ten minutes in the water.

15—If this ice is so thin that it breaks even when you try to roll out, try hammering your way out with your elbows, lifting them above the ice, and coming down on the ice,—till you have reached strong enough ice to roll out on.

16—If some one throws you a rope or a stick, arch your back. This prevents your feet being doubled up under the ice like a new born baby. Feather-kick your feet up horizontally behind you.

17—If some one else has fallen in, reach a stick to him. If not on skates, be careful he does not pull you in. You will have to get a grip on something. If enough people are around, you can make a human chain to shore holding each other's hands.

19—It is much better to spend a moment looking for a rope, which can be thrown to him from a distance.

20—If a ladder is available, by all means get it, provided the ice is too thin to approach the victim on your skates.

21—If quicker methods and equipment are not available, use a boat.

BOND 'SLUSH FUND' CHARGED

"License Number 13?—We'll Be Back Later"

MRS. HILDA H. QUIRK CHESTER KNIFFIN VIRGIL DILLEY

When Miss Virgil Dilley, of Chicago, and Chester Kniffin, of Boston, both vaudeville dancers, applied before Commissioner of Registration Mrs. Hilda Hedstrom Quirk they were handed the 13th license issued in 1936. "Perhaps we'd better see about a waiver," they said. Later they came back and happily signed license number 16.

CONTRACTOR ON STAND

Some bonding companies charge such high rates for underwriting city contracts that "it enables them to establish a slush fund," Chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the Boston Finance Commission declared today.

Sullivan said the legislature should investigate the rates charged by the companies for bonding contractors who do work for the city.

He made these remarks after commenting on a reputed arrangement that certain brokers have with some bonding companies, for a 30 per cent commission instead of the usual 20 per cent.

One of these brokers has been named in testimony, at the Finance Commission hearing which began yesterday and continued today, as Louis A. Roe of Winthrop, brother-in-law of Mayor Mansfield.

10 Per Cent Fee

Roe, according to testimony and his own admissions, received 10 per cent from a bonding company on a bond which another broker wrote. The other broker received 20 per cent.

The other broker, Sidney F Sharpe of Roslindale, said today in answer to queries at the hearing, that he was "positive" both Roe and a representative of the bonding company lied to him.

Another highlight of today's session was the reappearance as a witness of Alvin J. Pieczkowski, contractor, of Hyde Park with further details of how he was allegedly solicited for $1000 for an ash removal contract.

The commission had given Pieczkowski over night to consult a lawyer before revealing the names of two men involved

The contractor appeared today with Miss Celia Raphael, an attorney, but he stated he did not know the names of the men.

2 Mysteries

Chairman Sullivan labeled one of them as "The Mysterious Mr. A" and the other as "The Mysterious Mr. B"

According to Pieczkowski, Mr. B "seemed to have the run of City Hall. The contractor saw him in the corridor near the mayor's office and going in and out of the public works offices in City Hall Annex. He did not think Mr. B was a city employe.

Mr. B took him to Dorchester, where Mr. A came out and sat in the car and made the alleged offer.

"That was in December, 1934," said Pieczkowski. "I was the low bidder for the West Roxbury ash removal contract. My record was good and I expected to get it.

"Mr. B claimed he knew something about the matter. He picked me up in Hyde Park and drove me to Dorchester, but I don't know where the house is.

Demanded $1000

"B went in and came out followed by A. B said A could do a lot for me. B said to A: 'This man is interested in the West Roxbury ash contract. See what you can do for him.'

"After a few words, A said he would get the contract for me if I paid $1000. Otherwise I wouldn't get the contract."

In his story today Pieczkowski did not say, as he had in preliminary testimony yesterday, that the $1000 was supposed to be for the Mayor's campaign fund The campaign was over but there were some debts.

He said he told A he could not pay $1000 and A reduced his demand to $500. Pieczkowski said he agreed to pay $500 in four days but did not pay. He got the 1935 contract. He has not got the contract for 1936.

He said he first told the story two weeks ago to City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park.

Martino Di Matteo of Roslindale, the contractor in the bonding transaction in which Roe's name appears, was recalled today and testified that Roe visited his home with City Councillor James F. Finley of Roslindale.

Joan Says: Don't Lead With Lips!

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1936, International News Service

Hollywood, Jan. 3—Don't lead with your lips.

This is Joan Bennett's tip for 1936 on the important subject of lovemaking, and she should know, for the youngest and blondest of the Bennett sisters played opposite more male stars in 1935 than any other actress in Hollywood.

Joan Bennett

"There was a period not so long ago," said Miss Bennett, "when the girl who was easy to kiss had all the beaus and could actually choose from them for her husband.

"The frank, pally, modern type of girl was the vogue then. But femininity, delicateness have staged a comeback. The girl easy to kiss still has plenty of boyfriends, I suppose — but she is finding it harder to marry. Young men are swinging at least part of the way back to the Victorian outlook."

Joan, who is starting out the new year by appearing opposite the screen's new heart-breaker, Fred MacMurray, in the picture, "13 Hours By Air," believes most girls will quickly get smart to this.

"I'll venture a prediction," she said, "that the young men who expect to kiss a girl the first time they take her out are going to be disappointed often in 1936—even if it is leap year."

Champagne Ban On U. S. Made Wine

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—The Federal Alcohol Administration barred American wine producers today from calling their sparkling product "Champagne."

The American producers may label their product, "Sparkling wine—Champagne type," or "Sparkling wine—American Champagne—bulk process," but the word "Champagne" alone is reserved for vintners of the Champagne district of France.

Danbury, Conn., Jan. 3 (AP)—Carlo Ross is the year's first candidate for the title of Danbury's most courageous fireman.

Fire broke out in Ross' house when the mercury was at 10 below zero. In pajamas, he ran to fire headquarters, drove the truck to his home and put out the blaze.

DANCERS DODGE '13'

Get Luckier Marriage License

Number 13 is a bugaboo to most people.

And when it comes to stage folk they'll perform any sort of difficult calesthenic feat, rather than meet up with the unpopular figure.

So, when Virgil Dilley, from Chicago and Chester Kniffen, of Boston, vaudeville dancers, found they were the 13th couple in 1936 to apply for a marriage license at City Hall they suffered a mild case of apoplexy.

In fact, they made some excuse about seeing about a five-day waiver.

"Never mind about a license just now, we'll be back later."

The registrar smiled understandingly.

They did return later. They hadn't secured a five-day waiver. In fact, they didn't seem very interested in the matter.

Casually, they asked if any license had been given out since they'd left.

There had

So, with a great big sigh of happy relief, Virgil Dilley and Chester Kniffen secured marriage license number 16.

Anyway, with a little pretense about securing a five-day waiver, they had avoided that bugaboo "13" And that was that. They departed. Thankful for all small blessings.

Ickes Calls Foes "Coupon Clippers"

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—Slum clearance is basically a municipal, not a federal problem, Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes today told a crowd gathered for the start of construction on a $12,783,000 federal housing project in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn.

Indignantly denying the PWA public housing program has been a failure, he called his critics "the coupon-clipping gentry" and "the Lord Plushbottoms of the club windows."

Broker Files Bankruptcy Plea

Filing a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in federal court today, Francis S. Lane, broker, of Commonwealth avenue, Newton, listed his liabilities at $255,689 and his assets at $3764 Of his liabilities $122,276 were listed as secured by mortgages and the remainder unsecured.

Two Unvaccinated Pupils Sent Home

Althea and Harano Childs of Quincy avenue, Quincy, didn't have to go to school today on account of the storm.

But they went anyway —and were sent home once more because they had neither exemption cards nor vaccination marks.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Childs and the two children, whom they refuse to have vaccinated, will face Judge Kenneth Johnson in juvenile court, with the board of health as complainants, it was said.

Youth Held as Killer

Sherbrooke, Que., Jan. 3 (AP)—Eighteen-year-old Philemon Boisvert, a farm youth, was charged today with slaying his grandfather last Christmas Eve because, authorities said, the elderly man refused to let him take a horse and sleigh to attend a midnight mass.

Man Wounded in Pool War Views 2 Killer Suspects

While Boston detectives hunted an alleged hired killer in New York today, two Roxbury suspects were held, to be taken to the bedside of Frank T Sandberg, wounded during a number pool war in Roxbury Monday, which resulted in one death.

Attempts will be made by police to have Sandberg identify the suspects from his bed in Peter Bent Brigham Hospital as his assailants.

FACES POLICE GRILL

Sandberg, wounded in the shoulder, is expected to be released from the hospital tomorrow. He will be immediately placed under arrest on charges of setting up and promoting a lottery, police said today.

He will also be questioned about circumstances connected with his own shooting and James E. Buckley's death, police added.

Deputy Superintendent James R. Claflin, in charge of the investigation, announced today that several details of the shootings were still baffling.

Police said that Monday night Sandberg was set upon by Buckley and several aids, but that a hired killer quickly turned the tables by sending a fatal shot into Buckley's body

KILLER FLEES TO N. Y.

Sandberg fell wounded. The actual killer is then believed to have fled to New York.

Funeral services for Buckley were held today in Mission Church, Roxbury. The body was borne from his home in Whitney place, which is within the shadows of the Mission Church towers.

Rev. John Healey was celebrant of the mass. Interment was in Mt. Benedict Cemetery. Relatives and scores of friends attended.

Truex's Love Ends, To Seek Divorce

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—Reports that Ernest Truex, star of a dozen Broadway comedies, and pretty Mary Jane Truex would soon be parted by divorce were confirmed today by the comedian's mother. She said

Mary Jane Truex

"Yes, Ernest will seek a divorce, probably in Chicago. No date has been set for the filing of the action, but I know it will be in the very near future.

"I don't know whether Mrs. Truex is filing a divorce action as well, but I do know that Ernest is."

Advertising Gain Increases in 1935

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—The November gain in general advertising activity was the largest of the first eleven months of the year in contrast with 1934 periods, Printer's Ink reported today in its advertising index.

For November the business was 5.3 per cent over October and 11.1 per cent ahead of November, 1934. The gain expresses the improvement in November advertising volume after the usual seasonal adjustments including correction for seasonal change

For November the index stood at 83.2 against 79.0 for October and 74.9 for November, 1934.

Bernard B. Welch, P. O. Official, Dies

Bernard B. Welch, 55, assistant superintendent of registry in the Boston postoffice and senior member of the Cambridge Board of Public Welfare, died today at his home, 30 Emerson street, Belmont

Mr Welch had been in ill health for nearly a year.

Horse on Him

Philadelphia, Jan. 3 (AP)—Max Kranzel, stepping up to a policeman, asked:

"Pardon me, but isn't there a horse following me on the sidewalk?"

The policeman looked, called a patrol wagon and with Kranzel's assistance, hoisted a 500-pound Shetland pony inside. A peddler claimed the animal later.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Annice Brink

Now that innocent city dwellers are venturing out into the land peopled by descendants of Yankee horse dealers, a word of warning conveyed by one adventurer in Vermont is not amiss.

ANNICE BRINK

There is an outpouring of snow-bundled folk in that direction now. They load themselves with long pieces of wood which curl up at the ends, haul shackles and bamboo poles, and board the ski train.

There may be among them antique-fanciers who think that for a song or a quarter they may pick a choice piece in them thar hills. But remember the horse traders!

Somewhere in the White Mountain foothills last fall, a crew of city slickers equipped with bicycles disembarked from the bicycle train, a younger brother of the ski train.

A pair of the feminine variety wheeled into a village about a mile away, and stopped their bicycles before a cottage whose front stoop was an arm's length from the road. It was not the dainty little old lady who rocked and knitted, knitted and rocked, that attracted them.

Beside her, a porch table held an exquisite royal blue, gold and white vase holding some red-bronze strawflowers.

Though she acted a trifle surprised, the old lady consented to sell the flowers.

Little Country Slicker Hates to Sell Vase

"They look so beautiful in the vase," burbled the city slicker. "I just hate to separate them. Would you sell the vase too?"

"Well, now," said the little country slicker sweetly, "it's funny how everyone gets 'round to askin' for the vase. But I'd sooner part with my cow, Bessie. That vase has sold my white lilacs, half a medderful of buttercups and daisies, and come the snow, I'll set it in my front window and let it sell a cellarful of strawflowers to the ski people!"

One of the things Tommy Carroza, guitarist with Herb Marsh's band at the Theatrical Club, likes best to do is wander among the tables between dance numbers and strum and hum for the assembled populace.

They like it too, and tell him so. But to this day he wishes someone could tell him just what was said by two men who visited the club, and encouraged him to solo for them.

So intent was he on turning out his best brand of plectrum-product that he was not aware of frantic signals from the manager. The little man with rather pop eyes and the man with the queerly humorous, large mouth listened and tossed comments back and forth, none of which reached Tommy.

"I nearly folded up, later on," says Tommy, "when I found out I was performing for none other than Bert Lahr and that super-strummer, Cliff Edwards!"

Consults Fashion Pages For Southern Frocks

ABOUT TOWN BITS: Jane Whitney, singer at Levaggi's who has often acted as model on our fashion pages, phones in about buying southern resort evening frocks . . . because she is leaving right away to sing with Buddy Rogers' band at the Roney Plaza . . . "Angela Eleanor Mary McCann" is the name of a song written by Mary Young. And the lyrics are supposed to be most interesting . . . Charlie Farrell continues to be one of B. U.'s favorite sons, and it's no wonder when he comes through with an unsolicited and timely telegram to the football banquet at the Chamber of Commerce, pleading for victory over Boston College next fall . . . Betty Bryant, daughter of the Theodore Borsts of Newton, is dashing back and forth between New York and Boston; she has a Sunday commercial on WEAF, and otherwise is singing at the Embassy Room of the Fox and Hounds Club . . .

State Tax Problems

Vermont to Cut Government Cost

With excessive costs of government devouring the people's substance, a few states—among them Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Indiana—are setting heartening examples in efficiency and economy.

Although no state has as yet dealt effectively with the burden of obsolete local units of government, there is nonetheless a lesson to be learned in the states mentioned.

To bring out the facts, a group of observers—Charles N. Wheeler, James T. Williams, Jr., and Merryle Stanley Rukeyser—have made a survey at the request of William Randolph Hearst.

Herewith is the twelfth article in a series presenting the facts.

Vermont

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

Vermont today is a symbolic reminder of an earlier America, when simplicity in government and in all human affairs was more common.

The spirit of economy and personal integrity is deeply ingrained in the people of the state, where scandalous episodes of graft and political extravagance, so common in other states, are comparatively unknown.

Yet even in frugal Vermont, which is still predominantly rural, governmental expense, though relatively low, has expanded many fold through the years as men gradually came to demand more services from government.

For example, in 1848, the outlay of the state government was onlyy $99,000, and NEARLY HALF of this went for the administration of justice.

By the last calendar year, the budget had increased ONE HUNDRED TIMES, reaching $9,900,000—and, incidentally, expenditures for the administration of justice had declined to FOUR PER CENT of the total.

Foot Bills

Old-fsahioned, neighborly democracy still prevails in Vermont, where the people, knowing that they foot the bills, challenge every detail of expenditure. They not only keep in touch with their town affairs, but have an uncommonly lively interest in the proceedings before the legislature.

Voicing the attitude of the people of the state, David V. Anderson, of the state auditing department, recently said:

"The ideal goal is to have all governments operate as successfully as industries. To spend $2 for $1's worth of service is bad government. To spend one dollar for one dollar's worth of service is good government. But to obtain a dollar and a quarter's worth of service for every dollar spent is worth trying for."

In dramatizing for the people of the state everybody's business, namely, public affairs, the state Chamber of Commerce at Burlington has done notable work.

It has induced local governing units to present their financial reports graphically so that the citizens could quickly grasp the essentials.

In order to promote competition among the local units in improving the quality of their reports, the chamber gives diplomas of recognition to the counties and towns which publish the best financial documents.

Educates People

This state, with only 360,000 population, has been pre-eminent in the education of its citizens as to public fiscal affairs.

Its compactness promotes public interest in governmental affairs.

Moreover, the direct property tax falls on the average family, which is eager to avoid waste, knowing that it cannot shift the tax burden.

Finally, it is the tradition of the state TO KEEP KEY FINANCIAL OFFICERS ON THE JOB DURING GOOD BEHAVIOR, instead of rotating them like purely political elective officers.

The state has traditionally pursued a pay as you go policy, and has long become habituated to a balanced budget.

State officials, therefore, are embarrassed by a moderate floating indebtedness growing out of projects following the flood in 1927. The great dam, built with federal aid, will have to be maintained out of state revenues.

The floating debt grew out of expenditures for the dam and for extermination of tuberculosis cattle.

In order to relieve real estate, the state has determined against increases in property taxes, and the state has taken no direct taxes from property since 1927.

Accordingly, revision of the tax system will come up before the next legislature.

Taxes in Focus

The tendency of the federal government to impinge on tax fields formerly occupied by the states and the decline in the incomes of the people during the depression have brought the tax matter to a focus.

Likewise, an appropriation of $250,000 a year for old age pensions has added to the state's financial [illegible].

An an alternative to imposing tax burdens, Benjamin Gates, state auditor, is at the head of a movement TO ECONOMIZE THROUGH REORGANIZING TOWNS as economic and social centers in the light of current improved transportation and communication.

Mr. Gates would also greatly reduce the membership of the Legislature, which he would convert into a unicameral body, as Nebraska has done.

In other words, Mr. Gates advocates ADDITIONAL ECONOMIES instead of NEW TAXES.

Congressman-at-large Charles A. Plumely has encouraged Mr. Gates in his advocacy of modernization and simplification of the setup of local government, but thus far there has been no affirmative action.

In addition to its record of economy, Vermont takes especial pride in her schools, the quality of which has been improved with increasing appropriations in the last decade.

Vermont state officials boast that during the depression no schools have been closed for financial reasons, explaining that where schools have been closed it has been for evolutionary reasons where consolidations have taken place.

Daily Tax Fact

By B. C. FORBES

Noted Financial Writer

Political squandermaniacs try to mislead the people into believing that the multi-billion-dollar bill they are piling up will be paid by "the rich."

If the government were to seize all income in excess of $5000 for every individual, it would corral, according to an analysis of 1931 income tax returns by Dean Epstein of the University of Buffalo School of Business Administration, $4,000,000,000—which is less than the current year's federal deficit, figured at the rate the government has been going into debt this year.

If all incomes of those in 1931 rated millionaires—that is, those having incomes in excess of $50,000-a-year—were confiscated, the yield would amount only to one-sixth of the federal government's estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year.

Tomorrow Franklin D. Roosevelt will tell upon whom taxes really fall.

Radio Networks Clear Air For President Tonight

By N. F. T.

That widely cussed and discussed plan of the President to deal out his annual address to Congress as a night arrangement rather than a day discourse, has caused the coast to coast network deck to be cleared for action.

He will be heard over just about all the broadcasting facilities operating in the United States, the time being 9 o'clock this evening.

Controls will be switched to the National Capitol at the above time (WBZ-WEEI-WNAC-WAAB and WMEX) so that considerable shifting has been found necessary in order to accommodate the Presidential airing. When the Chief Executive elects to take a "mike" turn it is tantamount to a command involving all radio stations in every chain hookup. Notable among the commercial hours pushed off the slate tonight is the regular "Hollywood Hotel" highlight (WNAC) starring Dick Powell and ordinarily coming from Hollywood between 9 and 10 o'clock.

N. F. T.

Other offerings courteously sidetracked in favor of President Roosevelt, are "True Story Court of Human Relations" along WEEI lanes, the "Beatuy Box Theater" setting where WBZ waves roll high and "Grandma's Night Out" as regularly given to WMEX program patrons on Friday evenings.

* * *

World renowned figures in journalism have been marshalled for a nation-wide review of outstanding 1935 news stories. They hold forth tomorrow afternoon (WNAC) to likewise look ahead into 1936 and predict developments in the vast business, social and governmental scheme of things.

It's actually labeled "Forecasting 1936," and will occupy the 3:30 to 4 o'clock half hour, presented under Hearst Newspapers supervision in collaboration with the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Editors, statesmen, sport authorities and industrial executives have been regimented for the colorful dramatic program, designed by J. V. Connolly, head of International News Service and the King Features Syndicate.

Red Nichols, trumpet-blowing maestro, has a double surprise for listeners on the "College Prom" program (WBZ) tonight.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

In the closest finish which has yet marked the wing honor banner race, the Leaping Lenas of Everett nosed out the Flying Hawks of the John Winthrop School, Dorchester, to retain the flag for another three months.

The former, commanded by Leslie C. Woodman, won with 210 points, compared to 191 recorded by the Flying Hawks, sponsored by Miss Esther E. Larsen, teacher of eighth grade geography.

Fourteen members who became Eagles gave the Lenas the winning points. The sponsors, Randolph C. Wills and Chester Card say they are mighty proud of their boys as the only group to win the banner twice in succession.

This honor banner is awarded every three months to the busiest flight unit of the Junior Birdmen, points being listed for certain activities.

Following Miss Larson's group were the Louise Wheeler's Sky Girls of Belmont, commanded by Alice Heyd, with 109 points; the Joe Wilson Squadron of Amesbury, commanded by Edward Kaski and sponsored by William M. Jarosch, state chairman of aviation of the American Legion, [illegible] points, and Flying Wildcats of Newburyport, commanded by George Siganos, 48 points.

Again the race is on to win the brass mounted, red, white and gold banner from the Leaping Lenas before they keep it permanently as they are fully confident they can. Any squadron in New England or Canada may compete.

The banner itself is always sent to the winner.

Those commanders of squadrons not competing should get a point system sheet from Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston, today and join the swim for the biggest squadron honor obtainable.

HOLLAND

HAMPDEN Shares Rialto Spotlight With Lunts

By GEORGE HOLLAND

That matter of Walter Hampden and the Lunts being booked simultaneously in the Colonial Theater for the week of January 27 was not a knotty problem after all.

In his farewell tour as "Cyrano de Bergerac," Mr. Hampden will play instead at the Shubert Theater on the date he planned originally to come to the Colonial.

George Holland

This neat adjustment became possible when Mr. Hampden agreed to forego his week at the Colonial in order that Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne (Lunt) might have a second week at that house in Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew."

* * *

At that, Actor-Manager Hampden was gracious in acceding to the wishes of the Theater Guild, and Miss Fontanne and Mr. Lunt, because it was at the Colonial nearly four years ago that Mr. Hampden enjoyed a week of capacity in "Cyrano," and actors like to play "repeat" engagements at the theaters where they have been popular in the past.

The change also gives your correspondent a regretted opportunity to miss Mr. Hampden in "Cyrano." Marion French of this department covers the theatrical beat west of Boylston street (excluding at present the Copley Theater) and she it will be who'll report Mr. Hampden's "final" Boston appearance as "Cyrano."

* * *

Miss French also will get a chance to tell you of Cornelia Otis Skinner in this season's series of monodramas, as Miss Skinner is going to appear at the Shubert, west of Boylston beginning Monday, January 20.

Miss Skinner's new feature in her repertory is "Mansion on the Hudson," a play in six scenes. According to A. H. Handley, who is handling her Boston engagement, the play covers a span of 64 years in American social and economic annals, and describes "the disintegration of a once proud and wealthy family." If I am not wrong, Miss Skinner disclosed "Mansion on the Hudson" at a New York first-night the past fall, although on this point the dispatches of Mr. Handley are uninformative.

* * *

One revealing feature of these items about future bookings is the implication that all is well with the business-end of the current relationship between "Three Men On a Horse" and the Plymouth Theater. That Miss Skinner and Mr. Hampden have been allocated the Shubert Theater indicates to this corner that "Three Men On a Horse" will continue at least through the month of January at the Plymouth.

Successful in continuing that far, "Three Men On a Horse" looms as the candidate for the record run of the past 10 years. "Little Accident" played only 16 weeks at the Plymouth in 1928, and the George Abbott-John Cecil Holm farce begins its 10th week Monday.

Sweethearts Coming to Town

JACKIE COOGAN BETTY GRABLE

Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable, Hollywood's newest engaged couple, will be Boston's guests next week when they come to town to head the new stage show which will open at the RKO Boston on Thursday. They will appear in "Hollywood Secrets." Above photo shows Betty proudly displaying her engagement ring.

Marx Brothers Film At Bowdoin

The Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera," one of the comedy successes of the film season, will be the feature picture at the Bowdoin Square Theater, beginning tomorrow. The accompanying picture on the the program will be "His Night Out," with Edward Everett Horton, Jack LaRue and Irene Harvey. Vaudeville is scheduled for next Tuesday night.

Tremont's Bill

"Reckless," starring William Powell and Jean Harlow, and "Without Children," featuring Bruce Cabot and Marguerite Churchill is the film program of the Tremont Theater today.

Kay Francis Picked for "Golden Arrow"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Jan. 3—The Michael Arlen yarn, "Golden Arrow," was purchased at least three months ago and at the time it was bought Warner Brothers announced there were no definite plans for its production. Hal Wallis now has very definite plans and it's set for Kay Francis' next starring vehicle.

But you might as well forget "Golden Arrow" as the title, for by the time the Arlen opus reaches the screen it will be called "The Cream Princess."

Louella O. Parsons

Not only the title, but the story will be changed to suit La Francis, whose "I Found Stella Parish" has given her a new importance not only on the Warner lot, but throughout the country with her fans. Alfred Green directs and Charles Kenyon is now getting "The Cream Princess" in readiness so that Kay can start work within the next few weeks.

* * *

Walter Pidgeon, who had to achieve a fresh stage success before he could get recognition from the movies, is returning here within the next few weeks, to be co-starred with Mary Ellis in "Brazen." With two such excellent singers as Mary and Walter, you'd think we would have plenty of music, but Walter Wanger, who is producing this little skit, says there are only two songs, and these will be sung by Miss Ellis.

Eddie Ludwig has been borrowed from Universal to direct.

* * *

The popular Gregory Lacava hangs his hat at Columbia studios. Greg, who, more than anyone I know, can take an indifferent story and turn it into a hit, has signed to make two more pictures for Harry Cohn. This little agreement followed "She Married Her Boss," most of which I understand was written and directed on the cuff. Of course it had Claudette Colbert and the combination of Colbert and Lacava seems to have resulted in something no one dared hope for: one of the most amusing and best liked pictures of the year.

Sometimes I can't blame these youngsters who do everything they can to bring themselves to the attention of the casting directors and those who sign talent. There came to our town a young man named Lewis Da Pron a dancer. He wanted a movie job so he danced at night spots Sunday amateur nights. Jack Votion saw him and signed him to play opposite Eleanore Whitney, Paramount's favorite hoofer, in a college picture called "Three Cheers." And now Denver can sit up and crow because young Da Pron came from the Queen City of the plains.

'Captain Blood' Held

By MARION FRENCH

"Captain Blood," the stirring film version of Rafael Sabatini's exciting tale of piracy on the high seas, is held over at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters for the second week. This spectacular picture with Errol Flynn, Olivia De Haviland, Lionel Atwill, Basil Rathbone and Ross Alexander in leading roles has been playing to over-flowing crowds since its opening.

Playing a film for two weeks is an unusual procedure at these houses, the only other one to be shown that long being the Mae West hit, "I'm No Angel," which appeared at the Paramount Theater.

Following "Captain Blood," Warner Brothers sensational romantic drama, "Dangerous," will be seen at the Paramount and Fenway houses, beginning January 8th. Bette Davis, one of the screen's most competent actresses, is starred in this film. Her leading man here is Franchot Tone, with whom she is teamed for the first time.

"Broadway Hostess," a fascinating musical production will be seen on the same program with "Dangerous." Wini Shaw, the "Lady in Red" of the "Gold Diggers of 1935," is featured in this attraction. Phil Regan, Lyle Talbot, Genevieve Tobin and Allen Jenkins also appear in the picture.

Smiles Grace Copley Stage

Virginia Homer's flashing smile and her smart uniform have a big place at the Copley where "Ceiling Zero," a production of the stage hit that won high praise from local theatergoers, is rounding out its second week at the Stuart street playhouse. Virginia's acting has won her a warm place in the hearts of the Copley's patrons.

LEWIS HANEY ON TRENDS

Strength of Trade OUTLOOK OVERBALANCES U. S. Weak Spots

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Jan. 3—All careful business analysts are recognizing both strong and weak spots in the business outlook. Today I am making a serious attempt to sum up both sides of the argument for you.

First let us take up the FAVORABLE FACTORS, as follows:

1—We have had the most sustained rise in business activity since the great depression began. This includes gains in the "heavy industries," notably building.

2—A more effective policy of stimulating building activity seems probable. Rents are gradually rising.

3—Bank loans have shown the greatest increase since the depression began.

4—The aggregate incomes of farmers and factory workers have shown considerable gains, and prospects at present favor further increases.

5—On the whole, the inventory situation has improved, both in industry and trade.

6—Although subject to abuse, the existence of "easy money" is to be noted. The accumulation of unused balances caused pressure of funds seeking profitable uses.

7—A spirit of caution is rather widespread. (This is the good side of existing uncertainties.) There is little speculation in commodities or real estate, and forward buying is "under control."

8—Confidence in the Supreme Court is unshaken, and the Constitution seems likely to weather one more storm.

9—Radicals are split, tending to reduce the danger of hasty destructive action. The Democratic Party is split on the New Deal. Organized labor is divided. The Townsendites and Coughlinites are organizing themselves to death.

10—Signs of greater sanity and balance appear in people's attitude toward government waste. A real two-sided political campaign promises balance.

11—Mr. Roosevelt seems likely to sponsor business "recovery" for election purposes, which would force him to soft-pedal "reforms."

* * *

Now let us look at the UNFAVORABLE FACTORS. These make an almost equal list.

1—Government credit and the banking system are in an uncomfortable position on account of the unbalanced budget and the loading of the banks with short-term Treasury notes. This threatens inflation.

2—There is an abnormally large volume of unemployment (estimated at between 9 and 10 million persons). As much employment depends upon government spending, the problem of tapering off is difficult.

3—Foreign trade is hampered by unstablized currencies and many restrictions and international jealousies. Incidentally, the world's gold supply is badly maladjusted.

4—The cost of living is rising.

5—Price maladjustments exist.

6—Agriculture is badly disrupted, the normal movement of wheat, cotton and livestock being prevented by government controls and high prices.

7—Labor disturbances are a threat.

8—High taxes, plus the mortgage we are putting on our future national income, are very burdensome.

9—Great political uncertainties exist, not only at home but abroad. Here we may include foreign war possibilities. These are mere "uncertainties," and may not turn out so badly, but the point is that an abnormal amount of uncertainty becomes an unfavorable factor in itself.

10—The hangover of "emergency psychology," with its demoralizing tendency to make us depend upon government relief and accept unsound experiments.

On balance, I am hopeful of real progress in 1936. On one hand, the uncertainties created by New Deal politicians tend to hold inflation in check. On the other hand, business recovery may be able to develop sufficiently to make the New Deal look old.

An increase in productive employment in real business may accomplish three things: (1) Reduce radicalism, (2) Increase tax revenue, (3) Lead to a balanced federal budget and sound money.

Then, with real recovery as a basis, we may take our time to consider reforms—not as "emergency measures," but on their merits.

OUTLOOK On Food PRICES

MONTGOMERY REPORTS

By Associated Press

Washington, Jan. 3—The 1936 outlook for food prices was described today in a report by Donald E. Montgomery, AAA Consumers' counsel, as "not unfavorable" to the consumer.

"If, as is expected, there is a marked rise in consumer buying power during the coming year, retail food prices will be higher because of that fact than they will be if no such rise takes place," Montgomery asserted.

This does not mean, he said, that retail prices generally will be higher than now.

"Larger supplies of some foods for the coming year will tend to offset increased consumer buying power so that prices may hold at present levels or go lower."

* * *

Montgomery said fruits and vegetables should be abundant and cheaper.

"Dairy products will also be more plentiful; flour and bread prices should not change greatly from present levels until the new wheat crop is known, when, if planting prospects prove out, lower levels should prevail; potatoes and rice will be higher; meat prices will not be cheaper during the first half of the year, but relief from the present high level of meat prices is to be expected in the second half of the year, especially in the case of pork and lard."

The pork supply next summer, Montgomery said, should be about 10 per cent larger than this winter's.

"We hope that pig production in 1936 will be 30 per cent larger than in 1935, which is about all that could be expected in the absence of an adjustment program."

Coinage Record Set by Mint

December established a record in domestic coinage by the Philadelphia Mint with 75,528,000 pieces. It broke former record of 74,194,124 in December, 1934. Previous to that the record was 73,528,000 in December, 1917.

Domestic coinage for 1935 totaled 405,792,072 pieces, of value of $25,572,116, against 303,443,247 of value of $18,143,587 in 1934.

Coinage during December comprised: Half dollars 2,036,000; quarter dollars 9,672,000, dimes 15,920,000; nickels 14,502,000, and pennies 33,398,000; total 75,528,000, having aggregate value of $6,087,080.

BORDER Checked on SILVER

U. S. WATCHING SMUGGLERS

Washington, Jan. 3 (US) — Secretary Morgenthau has ordered customs agents along the Mexican border to be on the lookout for silver smugglers.

Reports that refined silver and silver ore have been smuggled across the border to get the higher price of 77.57 cents an ounce for newly mined silver paid domestic producers resulted in the order. The world price is less than 50 cents an ounce.

Capture of a small quantity of smuggled silver ore at Nogales, Arizona, was reported to the treasury today by Frank J. Duffy, customs agent. The ore was said to have come from a mine only 400 feet from the border. It was confiscated, the treasury said.

Reports were that the ore was being smuggled in and placed in "dead" mines, and then brought out as domestically produced ore.

New Issues Likely For Construction

This year will witness a test of the bond market with offering to investors of new bonds, proceeds of which will be used for new construction rather than for refunding. Several such issues are understood to be under consideration.

The first of these is now in process of preparation for registration with SEC in the near future.

The amount involved is moderate, $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, which will furnish funds to the issuing company for additions to plants; no refunding of outstanding obligations is involved, other than possibly a small amount of bank loans.

Although the past year witnessed issuance of a large amount of new corporation bonds, all were for refunding of maturing or called obligations except for small percentages of a few issues to add to working capital.

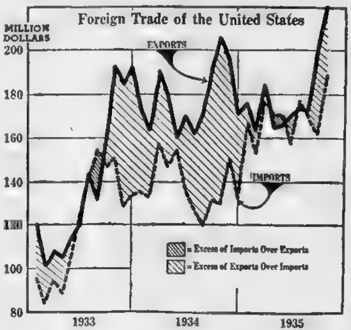
FOREIGN TRADE



INCREASING

Exports Highest Since '31

The foreign trade of the United States has been increasing. During October our exports to other countries reached a total of $221,200,000.

At the same time, imports rose to $189,200,000. Both exports and imports in October were the highest for any month since March, 1931.

One reason for the increase in exports is the devaluation of the dollar, making it cheaper for foreigners to purchase our merchandise.

Another factor is the reciprocal trade agreements with certain countries. Also, the general trend in many countries has been recovering.

Lately an additional reason has been in evidence: European nations have been stocking up on "implements" and "materials" for use in warfare.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Jan. 3—Belief that the success of the canned beer enterprise has been at the expense of bottle manufacturers lacks confirmation in a comparison of the aggregate sales of both types of containers during 1935, just completed by Ladenburg, Thalman & Co. Can for beers came into existence early last year.

The analysis shows that production of both have shown a parallel increase but that the cost of canning beer is definitely more than bottles, considering the number of times a beer bottle can be refilled and resold.

The study feel that the success or failure of cans vs. bottles over the longer period will depend upon reaction to novelty, shipping qualities, popular reception and to a great extent to cost.

It concludes with the belief that "the canning industry in the next year or two at least will show a considerable gain in sales through production of beer containers. Nevertheless there is not likely to be appreciable dimunition in the employment of bottles.

Soap Price Rise Rumors Persist

Relaxing pressure against shares of soap manufacturing concerns is attributed to rumors of an early advance in the price of the product. In trade circles this expectation is based on higher raw material costs. These items, including tallow, caustic soda, cottonseed oil and cocoanut oil, are all selling higher than a year ago. Because most soap makers contract for their requirements of these products from six to nine months ahead their cost of production is believed to have increased in consequence.

Chevrolet Wars On Rattle-Traps

An equivalent of the Nobel Peace Prize should be awarded Chevrolet Motor Co. for the highly significant social and economic experiment the company has inaugurated in paying dealers $20 each for every second-hand car junked during January. The company, of course, has in mind the personal motive of helping dealers reduce second-hand car stocks, thus enabling them to concentrate more on the sale of new cars, or the better-grade second-hand cars. But for years, one of the biggest threats to highway safety has been the all too great percentage of antiquated, patched-up automobiles on the road. Every thinking driver of a well-kept car will hope Chevrolet's subsidy to eliminate a part of the nation's rattle-traps, ready for the junk heap, will succeed.

* * *

The nation's railroad freight for 1936 began moving in earnest yesterday, after the New Year holiday with volume maintaining a substantial lead over a year ago, according to estimates from individual carriers.

Business in South Is Flourishing

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—Business is flourishing, factories are humming, new buildings are rising and the tourist trade is hitting the high spots below the Mason and Dixon line.

That encouraging report of economic conditions in the south, brought back by Frances T. Heard and Suzanne Gleaves after a business-trip tour, is detailed in the January House Beautiful.

Home and office building, bedspread manufacture and furniture production are booming in Georgia. Florida is staging a big comeback in building and in tourist trade. In the Carolinas and Piedmont belt, the writers found practically a cotton mill to every mile.

"The south is beginning to hum," they conclude. "Its industries, its building, its exporting have put on full steam ahead."

Stockholders Vote Capital Increase

Stockholders of James Talcott, Inc., factoring concern, present at a special meeting today unanimously approved an increase in the capital stock of the corporation from $3,500,000 to $6,000,000 and an increase in the number of authorized shares from 35,000 of $100 par value to 120,000 shares of $50 par value.

Under a reclassification of the company's shares, 50,000 shares of preferred stock will be authorized, of which the first series to be issued will be 30,000 shares of 5½ per cent participating preference stock of an aggregate par value of $1,500,000.

Pursuant to an agreement approved by the stockholders today, a public offering of these shares will be made by F. Eberstadt & Co., Inc., following the effective date of a registration statement which the company plans promptly to file with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

BROKERS' COMMENT

Paine, Webber & Co.—Continue to view steels and building and construction groups as best candidates to show upward leadership. Market as a whole, however, is still trendless and profit-taking on bulges may be expected to give the list a choppy appearance. Today's market may show hesitation, as traders await the President's message to Congress scheduled for delivery tonight.

Hornblower & Weeks—We regard the utilities and rails as being in a favorable position to assume the burden of leadership. In the former group, we favor especially North American, and American Water Works, and in the latter group Northern Pacific. These stocks, by their action, strongly suggest to us that they will be among the leaders in their respective departments.

Shields & Co.—Year-end, Congress and other influences will make for cross currents awhile longer but the main market factor—the inability of large holders of stocks to find better employment for their funds—remains unchanged. There will be some caution as to the immediate business outlook over the next few weeks that will tend to influence a quieter and irregular market but the promise of further definite upward movement in trade activity this year still warrants holding to a bullish policy.

GLIDDEN'S Earnings Rise

Glidden Co. report for year ended Oct. 31, 1935, shows net profit of $2,645,590, equal to $2.91 a share on the 753,881 common shares outstanding. This compares with net profit in the year ended Oct. 31, 1934, of $1,532,324, equal to $1.68 a share on the 650,000 shares of common stock outstanding at that time.

Current assets as of Oct. 31, 1935, were $14,387,815, including $1,031,969 cash and current liabilities were $14,387,815, including $1,030,969 cash and current liabilities were $3,070,173. As of Oct. 31, 1934, current assets were $12,544,208; current liabilities were $3,799,169.

UPSWING in Internal TRADE

PRODUCTION STEPPED UP

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

(Copyright, 1936, Universal Service)

New York, Jan. 3—Internal trade in the principal countries of the world has been improving since the low point of the depression much more rapidly than international commerce.

Instead of domestic recovery being dependent on foreign recovery, as theorists have alleged, the record indicates that in the present cycle, at least, the very reverse is true, namely, that internal recovery is a condition precedent to a comeback in international trade.

Estimates by the national industrial board reveal that in 1934 world industrial production was 25 per cent higher than in 1932, and that American production was up by about 23 per cent. In the first nine months of this year, American production revealed a 37 per cent pickup over the 1932 level, and world production showed a similar improvement.

That this recovery was destined to take care primarily of domestic demand for goods is indicated by the corresponding indices of foreign trade. In terms of physical quantities, rather than money value, world trade in the first half of 1935 was up only 4 per cent above the corresponding period in 1932.

Incidentally, though between 1929 and the low point of the depression America's ratio of foreign trade to total world trade declined, it has been staging a partial recovery since 1932. For example, in quantity, our exports were 7 per cent higher in 1934 than in 1932 and our imports were 9 per cent higher.

But latterly "New Deal" policies have been tending relatively to expand imports. For in the first nine months of this year, our imports were 32 per cent above the corresponding months of 1932 and our exports only 6 per cent.

That the relatively smaller increase in foreign purchases in our market is not ascribable to lack of purchasing power is indicated by the unprecedented flow of foreign gold to our shores.

Exports Decline

However, the foreigners for the most part elected to use the credits obtained from gold shipments to purchase American investments rather than American goods and services. Gold imports in 1934 and 1935 were greater than ever before in history.

The decline in our exports, measured in physical quantities, has been primarily in foodstuffs.

As a matter of fact our total exports, other than foodstuffs, have declined less in physical volume than our industrial production from the period 1921-1925. Omitting foodstuffs, our total exports in 1934 and for the first nine months of 1935 were approximately 7 per cent below the 1921-1925 average. Industrial production in the United States in 1934 was 12 per cent below the 1921-1925 average.

The improvement in production in the first nine months has been reflected in exports, which in quantity approach the 1921-1925 level.

Official estimates indicate that since 1920 only 12 to 15 per cent of our aggregate agricultural production has customarily been exported. By 1931, the ratio declined to 7.4 per cent. Likewise, in the last 15 years we have ordinarily exported less than 8 per cent of the value of our manufactures.

The significant change in our status as an exporter is in agricultural products. Our farm exports during the 12 months ending June 30 last were the smallest in half a century.

Prior to the Civil War, farm products constituted 60 per cent of our exports; before the World War, 50 per cent, and in the 1927-1931 period, 36 per cent. In the first 10 months of 1935 agricultural products amounted to only 30 per cent of our exports

BROKERS' LOANS Up 60 Million

Brokers' loans by member banks in New York City for their own account in the week ended December 31 increased $60,000,000 to $1,014,000,000. Loans on securities by New York City member banks in recent weeks compare as follows (000,000 omitted):

BUSINESS GAINS

Reported FOR N. E. Area

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The recovery of New England business proved to be a decidedly forceful affair during the final weeks of 1935.

Figures of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston show that business activity during November maintained about the same level as in October.

From July through October the bank says there was a moderately increasing tendency. But in the five-month period through November the average was substantially higher than a year before. Full December figures are not available but preliminary estimates point to fairly well sustained business activity, with some items such as department store sales larger than a year ago.

* * *

January is literally spotted with interesting news possibilities. But from our standpoint the most important one comes on the thirtieth. On that day the President's devaluation power and the 2000 million dollar stabilization fund expire. It is a date to look forward to, not because of the danger of expiration, but because the President can extend it by proclamation. It seems that the Chief Executive will do this, and we are wondering if he will take the opportunity to explain its present status as well as comment on the monetary outlook.

* * *

This and That: Also in January — date unknown — should come a decision by the Supreme Court on the AAA . . . U. S. Steel holds a dividend meeting on the twenty-eighth . . . And there is likely to be a British coal strike called on the twenty-seventh . . . Some of the publishing stocks are carefully examined these days . . . Widespread talk of increased advertising budgets by big business during 1936 is the reason . . . Drug stocks are trying to benefit from reports of medicine sales 5 to 10 per cent above a year ago.

* * *

On occasion it is necessary to go back a session and review the market in order to obtain a clear view of price trends. Yesterday is such a session. Some observers called it bearish as others professed to see many cheering developments. For our part we think the lift in the steel and rail sections worthy of more than passing notice. Heavy industry seemed to be coming in for some real attention with the advent of the new year. It was a hopeful sign as it does not seem that another year of recovery is possible without distinct betterment of capital goods industries.

* * *

Shorts: Steel and Bethlehem apparently only need half decent market conditions to encourage attempts to set new highs . . . Short forecast for 1936—This will be the year of the great fight between those who see inflation and those who do not . . . With the vogue to inflate in its last stages . . . Witness the desire of bonus backers to divorce that issue from payment plans . . . Credit holds the key . . . Can it be controlled? . . . There are many who say yes . . . And many a conservative banker says yes.

Warning Against Tax Expansion

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 3 (INS)—Warning that American business cannot absorb further tax expansion was sounded today by Frank W. Lovejoy, president of the Eastman Kodak Company, who declared new governmental levies would completely halt the business upturn.

For his own company, Lovejoy said, the 1936 taxes will total more than $600,000 in excess of 1935, with a steady increase foreseen even under existing laws.

"It must be apparent," he said, "that unless business increases sufficiently to offset these growing governmental requirements, the additional cost will eventually have to be borne by stockholders and employes.

"There is a limit to the number of encumbrances that business can withstand and still move forward and I, for one, feel that we have about reached that limit.

"These constantly increasing obligations not only tend to reduce dividends and payrolls, but also to destroy business confidence. Any further increase in such operating hurdles may, in my opinion, completely arrest the progress that appears to be accelerating at present."

STOCK Prices Are FIRM

NEW HIGHS RECORDED

New York, Jan. 3—With the exception of scattered mining and aviation issues, stock market prices pushed ahead today, some to new tops for the past several years.

Gains of fractions to 2 or more points predominated. The activity was a little better than in recent sessions.

There was little apprehension apparent over the convening of Congress, and the President's annual message tonight was being awaited with interest.

Among the most active equity favorites were Union Pacific, Santa Fe, American Seating, Air Reduction, American Radiator, Case, International Harvester, Deere, Atlantic Refining, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony, General Motors, Chrysler, Radio, International Telephone, American Telephone and Western Union. Losers included U. S. Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, Boeing, Curtiss-Wright "A" and Anaconda.

The late tone was firm.

Timely Events

The consensus of economic observers was that business, at least during the first half of this year, will continue to forge ahead. But there were still fears of growing taxes and increased operating expenses.

Week-end surveys noted that retail sales fell off quite sharply following the Christmas holiday, but it was pointed out that the volume was still above that of the same period last year.

Purchase of articles with which to celebrate the arrival of the new year it was said, did much to shade the post-holiday dullness usual in merchandise circles. The cold weather was also seen as a factor in maintaining demand at a relatively high rate.

A spurt of some $60,000,000 in brokers' loans during the week ended Dec. 31, as reported in the Federal Reserve statement, indicated to some analytical quarters that marginal buying of securities may have been revived.

Heretofore the greater part of stock dealings has been on a cash basis.

French francs were heavy at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions. They were off .01¼ of a cent at 6.60½ cents. Sterling was unchanged at $4.92½.

Farm Machinery Sales Higher

New York, Jan. 3—Sales of agricultural machinery manufacturers during 1935 are currently estimated to have exceeded 1934 by about 75 per cent, according to the Standard Statistics Company of New York, which also states that leading tractor and farm equipment producers are now making plans to take care of additional sales in 1936 of around 25 per cent.

Recent reports indicate that these expectations are reasonable. Tractors are still selling well despite the fact that the current period is seasonably slow. Thus, although dealers are still buying in fair volume, stocks in the hands of selling outlets are low.

Meanwhile, manufacturers are maintaining a high rate of production to build up supplies for the spring selling season and to prevent a recurrence of their experience in the early months of 1935, when stocks proved inadequate.

INCREASE In Tire Shipments

Shipments of pneumatic casings in October are estimated at 4,095,468 units, against 3,303,333 in previous month and 3,009,714 in October, 1934, says Rubber Manufacturers' Association, Inc. For 10 months of 1935 shipments were estimated at 42,212,674, against 40,386,897 a year before.

Production for October was placed at 4,050,509 pneumatic casings, against 3,786,873 in preceding month and 3,286,902 in October, 1934.

Output for 10 months was estimated at 41,313,472, against 40,1113,500 a year before.

GASOLINE Production High

Statistics released by American Petroleum Institute for the week ended December 28 showed a net addition of 1,387,000 barrels of motor fuel to storage at refineries and bulk terminals, following a gain of 967,000 barrels in the week of December 21.

The increase accentuates the high rate of operations at oil refineries, which last wek ran to still an average of 2,600,000 barrels of crude oil daily, or 75 per cent of capacity —a rate which is close to the midsummer level.

Bank to Pay

Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, payable Ferbuary 1 to stock of record January 23.

HOW LARGEST

Investors ARE UTILIZING Cash

By B. C. Forbes

The New Year started off uneventfully in the financial world. It is likely to end much more eventfully. By that time the political die for the following four years will have been cast. Should the November voting please the investing classes, spectacular buying of securities doubtless would be witnessed.

With very few exceptions heavyweights are neither selling nor short of stocks at present.

The income obtainable on highest-grade bonds is inadequate. Therefore, they are holding large quantities of bonds not rated as gilt-edged issues yielding better than the 3 to 3½ per cent.

Moreover, dividend-paying stocks, especially of strongly-established companies, have been accumulated, notwithstanding that here also the income rate is none too attractive. Many figure that quotations will advance because of improving business, improvement which is expected to continue for some time.

* * *

Not a few speculatively-inclined individuals began laying in supplies of utility stocks and second grade bonds quite some time ago. The gains already reaped are in most instances not merely substantial but enormous.

Stock after stock and bond after bond has soared anywhere from 50 to 150 per cent from the 1935 minimum. A Supreme Court decision against the anti-utility act is counted upon to send quotations still higher.

As a matter of fact, utilities show for the year just ended a far greater rise than either industrials (as a group) or rails. The exact figures (as compiled by Frazier Jelke & Company) show that from the last day of 1934 to the last day of 1935 representative utilities advanced 79 per cent contrasted with less than 31 per cent for industrials and less than 16 per cent for rails. Only mining stocks did better—up 88 per cent. The average gain for all classes is given as 41 per cent.

For the current year, one hears favorably mentioned good oil stocks, utilities, equipments, steel and building issues.

* * *

Jesse H. Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation —originated by Hoover and among the most useful of all Washington alphabetical organizations—has become a puzzle to the financial community.

He long ago ardently exhorted banks to become more courageous in making loans—even though bankers were quick to point out that his own institution, in Houston Texas, wasn't following such a course.

Others at Washington have repeatedly urged banks to "loosen up" towards borrowers and have intimated that the administration would only be too glad to have banks take over much of the lending it had found it necessary to undertake.

But, lo and behold, the chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation steps in, to the astonishment of bankers, and outbids them for a big loan—a maximum of $100,000,000—for the Great Northern railroad.

* * *

Bankers had evinced willingness to furnish this railroad the funds it desired. Always heretofore it had been assumed that neither the RFC nor any other lender of taxpayers' money cared to ladle out funds which private banking firms or institutions were willing to provide.

But the RFC gratuitously injected itself and offered the money at 4 per cent, a rate lower than either the road or the bankers had figured on.

What is the true meaning of this astonishing action?

Does it reveal that the "New Deal" really aspires, as has so often been alleged, to expand indefinitely its grip upon all forms of industry and enterprise?

Does it mean that bureaucracy is determined to multiply and multiply?

Does it mean that autocratic ambition still motivates Washington?

The ordinary taxpayer may well be pardoned if he preferred to have his money husbanded by the government rather than have the government—whose obligations are his—reach out for endless excuses to shovel out more and more millions and billions.

This issue doubtless will figure in the coming campaign.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Death in Grandstand

Fate Played a Trick on Adventurer and Saved His Life

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's Harold T. Leach, of 33 Lenox streets, Newark, N. J., with a story for us—the story of how he went out looking for thrills, and got one he never expected. The sort of a thrill Hal was looking for was the kind you watch from the grandstand. He didn't expect to participate in any of the doggone things himself. But—well—before he knew it, Old Lady Adventure was climbing right up into that grandstand after him.

FLOYD GIBBONS

A dirty trick on the part of Old Lady Adventure, sez you? Well, let's not be too hasty in judging the old dame that packs the thrill bag. As a matter of fact, she played not one trick, but two, on Hal Leach on that bright Sunday morning in 1912 and Hal swears that one of those tricks saved his life.

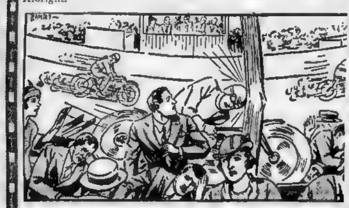
Now let's look over the first trick the old girl played on Hal. Hal set out that Sunday morning to go to the motorcycle races which were being run on a wooden track on South Orange avenue. And right from the beginning it looked to Hal as if the whole trip were hoodooed. He wanted to get to the track early and get a certain seat that was a favorite of his, right down in the front row and just above the tent where the riders rested, but one thing and another turned up to delay him.

He started from home late, and just missed a trolley. He had to wait ten minutes for another one, and then, at the point where he had to transfer to the old South Orange avenue line, doggoned if he didn't just miss another car. He got to the track before the races started, but too late to get his favorite seat in the front row. He had to be content with one right back of it in the second row.

And maybe he didn't cuss his luck over that. He didn't know then that it was Old Gal Adventure that was putting the jinx on him.

There was a great crowd at the track that day. Every seat in the stands was filled before the races started, and the overflow of the mob was jamming the bull pen. Excitement was running high, for there were some doggone good races being run, and there was one particular event that everybody was interested in.

That was a race between Eddie Hasha and Johnnie Albright. A great rivalry had sprung up between these two. They were the fastest riders on the track, and this race was to decide which of them was the champ. There were three other riders in the race—just to make it more spectacular. But nobody was paying much attention to those other three guys. Every pair of eyes in the place were focused on Hasha and Albright.



It was the big day for Eddie Hasha and Johnnie Albright—and well it might be. For those two fellows were setting out on their last ride.

The race was a corker, right from the start. Hasha took the lead and held it. Johnnie Albright was right behind him. The other three riders trailed along in the rear. Eddie had run up a lead of a hundred yards or so on Albright, when suddenly things began to happen.

There was a four-inch black line circling the track, above which the racers were not allowed to go. Beyond that line the track banked up to a perpendicular wall four feet high. Above that was a fence of heavy wire behind which the spectators sat. That was for their protection in case of accident. But there are times when even the best of protections fail to protect.

Hasha, still in the lead, was clipping it off at eighty-five miles an hour, when suddenly he hit the deadline—that four-inch black line that went around the entire track. Immediately, the referee fired a gun, signalling a foul and ordering Eddie Hasha out of the race.

But Eddie didn't stop. To the consternation of the crowd he kept right on going. His motorcycle whizzed right up that four feet of straight wall—right up the heavy mesh wire in front of the spectators—shot over the top of the fence and toppled into the grandstand, RIGHT WHERE HAL LEACH HAD WANTED TO SIT.

There followed the wildest ten seconds that Hal ever saw in his life. Hasha dived headlong into a timber upright that supported the grandstand roof and was killed. His machine landed in the midst of a shrieking mob of race fans in the front row, and right in front of Hal. Its motor still going at top speed, it hopped crazily along that front row, killing and maiming as it went.

Then it leaped high in the air, hurdled the wire fence again, and fell on top of Johnnie Albright as he sped on down the track in the lead of the other three riders.

Johnnie Albright was thrown from his motorcycle, and he was dead when they picked him up. Seven other men died in the grandstand from injuries they sustained when the motorcycle landed among them.

Says Hal Leach: "I helped lower the bodies down to the track, and then passed out of the picture—just from the shock—and was lowered down in my turn. Do you wonder why I get the shivers, even now, whenever a motorcycle dashes past me?"

Well sir, if I were Hal and had gone through that experience, I think I'd get the shivers if even a Kiddie Kar dashed past me. A swell story, Hal, and here goes your ten bucks. Don't miss the yarn I'm wheeling out tomorrow.

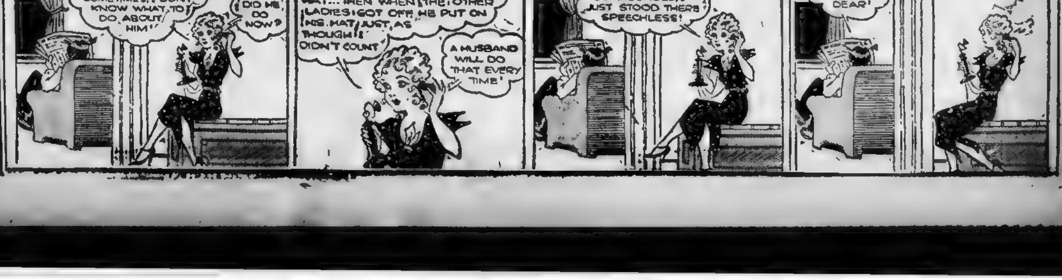
A Quick Recovery



GOODNESS ME, DAGWOOD IS THE JOY AND DESPAIR OF MY EXISTENCE ..... SOMETIMES, I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO ABOUT HIM!
WHAT DID HE DO NOW?
THIS AFTERNOON WE GOT INTO AN ELEVATOR WITH SEVERAL LADIES AND HE TOOK OFF HIS HAT... THEN WHEN THE OTHER LADIES GOT OFF HE PUT ON HIS HAT JUST AS THOUGH I DIDN'T COUNT
A HUSBAND WILL DO THAT EVERY TIME
WELL, HONESTLY, I WAS SO DUMFOUNDED, I JUST STOOD THERE SPEECHLESS!
BUT JUST FOR A SHORT SECOND, DEAR!

AUSTEN LAKE

Scrap Paper Album; Thoughts While Policing One's Pockets

THIS IS THE VIRGINAL, forward-looking period of the year when I police my pockets of the paper rubbish accumulated through the months. Most of it, jotted as memoranda, is unintelligible now, unrelated bits of marginalia pencilled on the backs of empty envelopes, timetables and food menus.

Now who the Sam Hill is Sam L. and what is D-D? . . . Sam Langford? . . . O yes! Blind old Sam, his battered black face looking like a Smith Brothers' cough drop, had lounged under an apple tree at Pompton Lakes last summer, listening to the thud of Joe Louis' training punches that he could not see.

A ring of curiosity mongers, the flotsam of every fight camp, had pressed around to listen to his battle chat and buy his souvenir post cards.

That was it!

He wanted me to get Paul Bowser's consent to peddle his cards through the crowd at the Dan O'Mahony-Don George wrestling championship. Well, that was attended to.

Clue to Garden Fiasco

HERE'S AN OLD WORLD SERIES press stub and a jotting, "Call Al. Rhine, 86500." Did I call, and for what purpose? And here on a fragment of a Jack Dempsey carte du jour is a smudged memo, "Geo to stick by C. His ideal."

That's easy. There had been an orchestra blowing blurts of sour horn music in Dempsey's place. The passing floor show of fat men in dinner coats, lipstick ladies, sport greats and sport tramps, had flowed past the table where I sat nursing a tall glass with George Marshall, the night-blooming orchid-man who owns the Boston Redskins.

George had been lifted on the tide of his emotion and had pledged undying loyalty to Eddie Casey as his new football coach. ("As long as I am with the Redskins, Eddie will be my coach.") Well, that old pledge was a scrap of paper, too.

A Pullman receipt and the scribble, "Fri. Doc. 2 ring." It's a New York Pullman coupon, upper 4. That must have been the night before the Dartmouth-Princeton game when all the lowers were sold out. That brings it back. Dr. Harvey, the Harvard square dentist, wanted a pair at ringside for the Sharkey-Winston fight.

There had been a fog of tobacco fumes and the sea of tilted faces in the Garden gloaming as the melancholy black man had collapsed under a patticake push from Sharkey's mitten, and lay on the ring floor like a decomposed cadaver until the house cops had hoisted him onto the ring stool and sloshed him with a bucket sponge. And the clients had climbed down from their chairs and come to the press pit to pinch their nostrils with their thumbs.

Souvenir of Failure

HERE IS A TATTERED half page of typed copy that starts: "The Navin Field press coop was like the hurricane deck of an Arctic patrol boat . . ."

That brings back the scene during the second game of the Cub-Tiger World Series, when the massed chatter of the Detroit patrons' teeth sounded above the clatter of telegraph bugs and press typewriters.

The fans had huddled in greatcoats and blankets, stuffing sport extras into their chests to break the icy updrafts.

A torn corner of a Western Union blank, and the smudged notation "Max husk of . . . Turner reaches . . . "

A souvenir of my first day in Baer's camp at Speculator, N. Y., last September, when I had sat under the training ring apron and watched a perky, snub-nosed apprentice kid named George Turner shower the ex-champion with roundhouse punches that jolted his chin and knocked the rubber tooth guard from his pouting lips.

The apprehensive blustering of Baer in his woodsie retreat and his hatred of the aching quiet, the autumn russets, and the timbered hills that rolled away from his lake.

And as a mental corollary, the later night at the Yankee Stadium, with Baer floundering under Louis' first solid punch and, spraddled on his knees, turning to make a goofy, half-demented gesture of farewell to the fight suckers who had paid nearly a million to witness less than 12 minutes of soft-shoe shuffling.

Yesterday's Trivia

THE LOST AIR-MAIL BAGGAGE check for which I had vainly fumbled in the wee morning hours of October 5, when I had flown from Chicago to Newark to officiate the Penn-Princeton game.

The memory of the incandescent pools of shimmering light that we had flown over in the velvet night. The strings of road lights, like yellow beads. The rotating fingers of aerial beacons against the gloom.

An unused press ticket for the Boston College-Holy Cross game and the recollection of Nick Morris' gray satin breeches flashing like quicksilver through the B. C. line and on for a touchdown before the frosty mist had settled from the referee's opening whistle . . . a calling card and the New York address of a Lafayette classmate who came into the officials' quarters at the Columbia-Michigan game, breathing alcoholic exhalations and talking intelligibly of Tim, Pete and an army of old collegiate ghosts . . . Babe Ruth's Christmas card and recollection of the affable, stout athlete with gingerbread features, signing patient hundreds of sample signatures for training camp yokels in St. Pete, and his disappointment pout in the Braves' rubbing room, amid the odors of linament and perspiration on the day that he rumbled his resignation to an audience of newsmen . . .

And so on and so on. Yesterday's trivia. Phantoms on scrap paper that belong to the rubbish of 1935. Who knows, a year hence there may be others, like, "Get 6 for Red Sox World Series," or "Braddock down in 4th, Louis left hook makes him champ."

BIG PUSH OF 1936 STARTS FOR BOSTON'S FOXX

JIMMY FOXX D. EDWARD BOYER

Away from the 1936 barrier breaks Jimy Foxx, new Red Sox slugger, who is expected to hammer the Hose to the A. L. peak this year. He's wrestling with Boyer, health club expert, in Philadelphia. Jimmy has just enough soft flesh so that he can train without going stale before season's opening.

BABE
Off to Play Golf
IN FLORIDA

New York, Jan. 3 (US)—George Herman Ruth, the Babe Ruth of the New York Yankees, was on his way to Florida today—with his wife—but not for the training camp.s

This time, for the first time in his illustrous career, the Babe is leaving for Florida for golf only.

Early plans called for the Ruth's departure sometime between the 15th and 20, but the recent poor weather and Babe's eagerness to cavort on the tropical fairways caused a change. Babe said

"I haven't a baseball plan of any kind in mind. I'm not complaining because I am perfectly happy as I am.

"I plan to spend more than two months in Florida. It probably will be closer to three months from now when I turn back north again."

Red Sox Reunion At Tribe Meeting

By Joe Cashman

Bob Quinn hoped, but hardly expected that the Braves reorganization would be completed today, when the stockholders in the new franchise meet at the State street office of Attorney Robert Goodwin.

It looked like a Red Sox reunion at Braves headquarters in the Copley-Plaza on the first working day of the new year. Bill Carrigan, Fenway manager six different years; Henry Gumble of Columbus, O., who owned a share of the Sox during the Quinn regime, and Coach Duffy Lewis, who gained his first big league fame at the Fens, visited Boss Bob, who was monarch on Jersey street for a decade.

Carrigan, looking in the best of health, dropped around to wish his old employer the best of luck. "Old Rough" couldn't be dragged back into baseball. He's too well-set and contented up in his native Lewiston.

Duffy Lewis would rather listen than talk, but, when he can be persuaded to open up, he's a most interesting yarn spinner.

He tells a classic about a play he pulled in 'Frisco while with Oakland during his first year in the Pacific Coast League back in 1908.

"Brick" Devereaux, 'Frisco pilot and noted as an acrobatic comedian, was on third base with the tying run and one out in the ninth when the batter hit a long fly to Lewis in the outfield.

"Duff," catching the ball, believed it was the third out and started to run for the clubhouse, in deep centerfield.

Devereaux, seizing the chance to clown at the expense of the "busher," began cartwheeling his way toward the plate, the while he lectured to the customers on the dumbness of the rookie.

Before Lewis reached the exit gate, however, his centerfield mate, in no uncertain or refined terms, advised him that only two were out and to throw the ball to the plate.

"Duff," without looking, set in motion one of the greatest throwing arms the game has ever seen and the 'Frisco pilot was nipped at the plate, while the crowd that had been cheering his antics the moment before jeered him unmercifully.

All is quiet along the Red Sox front General Manager E. Trowbridge Collins won't drop a hint to his closest friends as to when he'll be holding a luncheon to announce the acquisition of Roger Cramer of the Athletics

U. S. TEAM
Sails for GERMANY

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—The United States Olympic winter sports teams today headed for the winter games at Garmisch Partenkirchen, Germany.

About 45 athletes—the number was uncertain almost up to sailing time at noon—and a group of officials and coaches made up the squad aboard the S. S. Manhattan.

The candidates for the women's ski team and a number of men ski runners and jumpers already are in Europe.

Eddie Eagan Clifford (Tippy) Gray, who rode with Fiske in 1932 to win the Olympic title, notified the bobsled committee yesterday of their willingness to pay their own expenses if they would be permitted to join the squad. This made possible three four-man bob teams.

The officials and many of the athletes are paying their own expenses, and every team is supposed to be self-supporting.

The hockey team will play a series of exhibitions in England, France and Switzerland.

HUMPHREYS

New York, Jan. 3 (INS)—Released from Jersey City Medical Center, where he has been recuperating from a serious illness, Joe Humphreys, veteran fight announcer, headed South today.

Princeton Soft Picking For Indians, Says Warner

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 3 (INS)—Pop Warner, football's most revolutionary coach, whose style of football was vindicated when Stanford beat Southern Methodist in the Rose Bowl on Wednesday says these same Indians—who were freshmen when he left the "farm"—would have slaughtered Princeton.

9nd Warner's opinion is all the more weighty when one considers he is now coaching at Temple University in Philadelphia, and naturally owes some allegiance to the East

"Princeton," explained the famous mentor who is here on a visit today, "wouldn't have had a chance with Stanford. The Tigers, despite their unbeaten record last season, didn't meet any of the strongest teams in the east such as Pittsburgh, Army, Colgate, Holy Cross, Boston College, Villanova, Fordham, New York or ourselves, and I can't see how any of the critics can place them ahead of the Rose Bowl winner."

Louis to Fight Feldman, Feb. 3

New York, Jan. 3. (US)—Joe Louis will meet Abe Feldman in a 10-round bout in the Olympia Arena, Detroit, Feb. 3. The bout will be under the joint promotion of Mike Jacobs and the Detroit Arena.

Hymie Caplan, manager of the New York fighter, was to sign the papers today.

The Feldman fight will be the final competitive match for Louis before his sheduled meeting with Max Schmeling in June. Louis fights Charle [illegible]tzlaff in Chicago, Jan. 17.

'Queen Helen' May Retire From Title Tennis Whirl

San Francisco, Jan. 3 (INS)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, "queen of the tennis courts," today indicated she may permanently retire from championship tournament play

In an interview with International News Service, Mrs. Moody disclosed she hasn't any plans to return this year to Wimbledon—where she staged her great comeback last year—or to Forest Hills, where she has been absent for two years, or to participate in any tournament whatever.

"Does the last of tournament plans mean you are retiring from the courts?" she was asked.

"At the moment, I have no plans to play tennis anywhere this year," she said.

"When will you make your plans?"

"I don't know. If I decide to play, I may make up my mind at the last minute."

Former Governor Among Owners

FRICK HAS 315 SHARES

(Copyright, 1936, by Boston Evening American. All rights to publication, in whole or part, reserved.)

The Boston American today is able to reveal the full list of Braves stockholders up to the moment of reorganization, when the National League vacated the club franchise and took over the club, lock, stock and barrel.

The following names and amount of stock held by each is an interesting agenda of the investors up to the moment of the Bob Quinn-C. F. Adams purchase of control from the League.

In the reorganization, the new officers of which are expected to be named today, every one of the following are to be given opportunity to reinvest in the new issue of stock on the basis of old holdings. How many will do so is not known.

Under the old scheme Charles F. Adams and his family were principle owners.

There are 5727 shares of stock in the name of Charles F. Adams, with 1000 shares in the name of Francis W. W. Adams and 1000 more in the name of Lillian Adams.

The long list of minority stockholders and the amount of their holdings came to light during a stockholders' meeting of the club at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

WETMORES

The Wetmore-Savage Co. owns 1650 shares, while Bruce Wetmore has 81 in his name.

The list of Braves stockholders and the amount of stock held by each before the company was dissolved follows:

Ford Frick, president of the National League has 315 shares.

Major Francis P. Murphy has 541.

Buddy Myer
Gets Raise, But Pettit None

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—Buddy Meyer, second baseman who won the American League 1935 batting championship, was the only Senator to be offered a salary increase in new contracts sent out by Owner Clark Griffin.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 3 (AP)—Leon Pettit, southpaw pitcher, said today that he was dissatisfied with the terms of the 1936 contract recently mailed to him.

He has written Griffith asking an increas in pay.

Pettit won 8 and lost 5 games for the Senators last season.

Bob Watson Tropical Ace Jockey

By Associated Press

Bobby Watson, the Canadian riding whirlwind, is the leading jockey at Tropical Park. The J. E. Smallman pilot has scored 19 victories in the first 16 days of the meeting and is leading the field by a comfortable margin.

Omaha is going abroad in quest of the Ascot gold cup, but his owner, William Woodward, is not certain the 1935 three-year-old champion will ever get to the post in England.

The son of Gallant Fox appears perfectly sound in light workouts at the Belair farm in Maryland and at Aqueduct, but it has taken extended trials to bring out the lameness which forced him out of competition last August.

"If he is unsound, it might as well be shown up in England as in this country," said Woodward. "If he fails to stand training, I plan to turn him out for a year in England with the hope a rest will bring him back to the races in good condition. Ultimately, however, Omaha will return to the stud in this country."

Browning 'Go Through' Kid

By Jack Conway

SPEAKING of news: There isn't any danger of Jim Browning trying to run out of his finish wrestling bout with Yvon Robert at the Garden a week from tonight.

Browning not only has posted a forfeit of $2500 with Paul Bowser to go through with the Robert match, but has never avoided a first class opponent during his mat career.

Robert is entitled to considerable credit for agreeing to meet Browning. The latter was formerly recognized as world champion in New York State. He is one of the most powerful men in the wrestling game, while his turn out scissors is liable to make Robert dizzy.

Mr. Boston

• • •

Browning accepted the tussle with Robert as part of his plan to force Dan O'Mahony to give him a title contest in Boston.

A victory over Robert, who has been dodged by O'Mahony and Ed Don George, would put Browning in a spot where he could compel the champion to meet him.

• • •

COUNT POLOWSKI

ALEX MacLean has signed Charley Strack to oppose Count Casimir Polowski in a finish bout at the Arena on next Wednesday night. Strack recently won from Leo Numa at the Arena, and was then billed to meet Polowski.

The latter wouldn't go through with the bout at the time, and MacLean was obliged to grant Polowski a postponement. This contest will bring together two of the roughest of the mat men, and a stirring battle is assured.

• • •

Johnny Buckley will sail for France next week to help prepare Lou Brouillard for his world's middleweight championship bout with Marcel Thil, which will be held in Paris on January 20.

If Brouillard wins, he will defend his title in March in Paris under the direction of Jeff Dickson.

Following the Brouillard-Thil bout, Buckley will hop to London to see Jack Peterson and Len Harvey trade blows on January 29. If Peterson wins, Jack Sharkey may journey to England to meet the British champion.

• • •

The large crowd at the Bruins-Canadiens game on New Year's Night proves that Boston, with a fighting team, is one of the best hockey cities in either the United States or Canada.

The Bruins have not a finished club, but they are in there trying, and gives the spectators action.

• • •

Walter O'Hara is planning to go to California to see the Santa Anita Handicap. O'Hara and Billy Ames, his publicity director, have been busy at Narragansett Park, getting things ready for the 1936 racing season.

• • •

DOG RACING

RUSS MURRAY, who did such an excellent job at launching dog racing at Revere, is back in town following the closing of Epsom Downs at Houston, Tex. Russ is already planning for next season.

"We have made arrangements to obtain 500 of the fastest dogs in the world," said Murray. "Last year we showed more than 1400 dogs at Revere. Our plans for 1936 call for fewer dogs, but dogs of a higher quality.

"We believe that with class dogs racing against each other the public will get to know the dogs better and that there will be greater interest in the various contests.

"In my conduct of dog racing at Revere, I have done everything possible to keep the sport on a high plane. The tremendous patronage we received from the public proved that our efforts were appreciated."

• • •

Later in the winter I look for Russ to take a trip to Florida so as to get a line on the dogs that are racing there.

• • •

Murray intends to show many of the better class of the Irish greyhounds at Revere. Dog racing has been established on a firm basis in Ireland for several years.

• • •

Allan Wilson, general manager of Suffolk Downs, will journey to Hialeah when that track opens this month. Wilson will invite the leading horsemen in the country to ship their thoroughbreds to the East Boston track.

• • •

Lou Smith will head back East next week, and will try to enter into a date agreement with Narragansett Park and Suffolk Downs. Smith will represent only Rockingham Park in the proposed talk on dates.

With Agawam still in the process of reorganization, Smith does not wish to represent it at this time. There is likely to be a new lineup at Agawam.

MARATHONER IN DERBY

Seventh in B.A.A. Run

HOPES TO BE WELL UP IN DERBY

By Walter Kiley

Joseph W. Plouffe is a marathon runner. And a pretty fair one, too.

A fellow has to be good to finish seventh in a star-spangled field such as hit the Exeter street tape in the B. A. A. Marathon last April.

Now the Worcester runner has been smitten by the speed skating bug. The germ has been there for some time, six years or so.

But it took Irving Jaffee's daily articles in these columns to bring him into the competitive field.

Plouffe not only hopes to beat Johnny Kelley of Arlington and the rest of the Unicorn Marathon field a few months hence, but also to lift the fine Silver Skates which go with victory in the Derby being conducted by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser at Franklin Field on January 26.

CONFIDENCE

Plouffe's letter is interesting. Let's read a few excerpts from it:

Dear Mr. Jaffee:

"Your speed skating articles in the American and Advertiser have made me feel the urge for skating. I'm interested in all sports but my two favorites are marathon running and skating.

"I finished seventh in the B. A. A. Marathon last year, and I know I can do better this season. But now I am wondering if I couldn't do even better in speed skating.

"What I would really like to do is try my luck in speed skating over the full marathon distance of 26 miles 385 yards, just to satisfy my curiosity.

"When I read that you got your start through winning a Silver Skates Derby, it makes me wonder if I couldn't do likewise.

"Who knows but I may be an Olympic skater some day. At least, I am willing to be one of the 'dark horses' and will take a crack at your Silver Skates Derby.

"At the worst, I have loads of confidence. To me, confidence is half the battle. I'm willing to gamble the other half."

Signed,
JOSEPH W. PLOUFFE,
75 Hollis Street, Worcester.

OTHER ENTRIES

Well, Joe's entry is welcome. And so are the others which are flooding in. Like that of Nina Annis, a girl who is heading for Franklin Field all the way from Milo, Maine; and that of one "Sugar" Frank, 42-year old veteran skater from Beacon street, Brookline; and those of William O'Sullivan of Blue Hill avenue, George Stewart of Hyde Park and Robert Stewart of Hyde Park, George Besler of Roslindale.

Miss Bobbe Cardn of Jamaica Plain, Paul O'Toole of Atherton street, Sigmund Garte of Dorchester, Ray McGehearty of Providence, Bernard Kramer of Providence, James Kingham of Milton, Fred Carlson of Milton, Meyer Goodman of Dorchester, Alex Marr of Everett and a host of others.

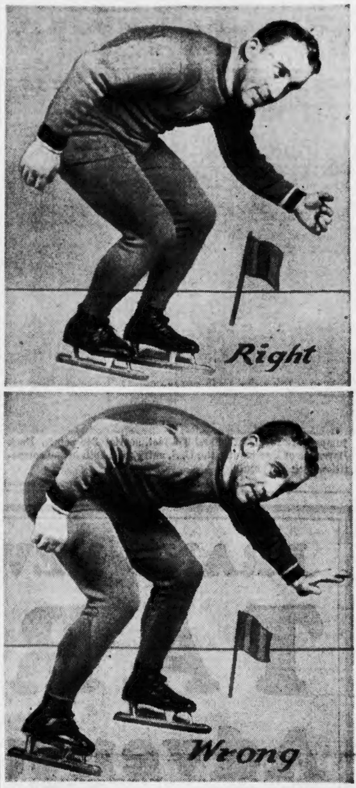
HOW TO GET RID OF THAT TIRED FEELING



Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

NO. 12—ANOTHER WAY TO MAKE THE RINK TURN

RIGHT WAY (First in This Set)—Instead of crossing my feet, I keep them almost together, the left foot about a skate's length ahead of right. While doing this, my body is relaxed and bent almost scissors-like while my shoulders and weight lean in the direction I am skating. This of course is done in making sharp turns when you have great speed, although it naturally slows your speed up slightly while you stop striding. This type of turn will help rest your legs when tiring.

WRONG WAY—Note that my legs are far apart, so that my weight is not centralized. My body is not bent over quite enough. Shoulders are not in line with my skating leg. Body is not in position to avoid a stumble or possible fall.

American-Born Goaler Star of Toronto Varsity

One of the few American-born players in the history of Toronto varsity hockey stands between Harvard and victory when the Crimson opens its international intercollegiate series with University of Toronto at the Garden tomorrow night.

He is Holton Shipman, the only American lad on the Toronto squad, one of Varsity's two great goalies. The other is Derwyn Owen, son of the archbishop of Toronto.

Confident that its own defense is capable of bottling the Varsity attack, Harvard attention is centered on Goalie Shipman.

One slip may be enough to give the Crimson its first victory over the Toronto sextet in several years, and the high scoring Harvard forwards intend to take advantage of it.

Toronto's only victory to date is a 7-3 decision over Yale, registered more than a month ago.

The Toronto squad of 12 players, coached by Ace Bailey, former Toronto star, who is making his first appearance Boston in connection with hockey since his near fatal accident in the Garden two years ago, arrived this morning at 10 o'clock and registered at the University Club, where it is scheduled to remain until Sunday.

Harvard will enjoy an advantage in manpower tomorrow night, for the Toronto squad is composed of only two teams, including the extra goalie, Owen.

The starting combination has Shipman, goal; Bill Jeffry and Bruce Charles, defense; Ralph Ripley, Jim McPherson and Normie McClelland, forwards.

Olympics Nose Out Princeton Six, 2-1

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 3—Princeton University's hockey team scared the American Olympic team here but lost, 2 to 1.

The Olympics were saved from possible defeat by the superb play of Tom Moons in the nets.

The Olympic team will sail tonight for Germany.

RANGERS Leafs Meet MASTERS

CUBS BEATEN BY EAGLES

Although they may be the class of their respective divisions, Rangers and Maple Leafs met their masters in the Americans and Maroons in the Thursday competition of the N. H. L.

The Rangers are tied for first place in the American Division and were the odds on favorites to flatten the Amerks, but Manager "Red" Dutton's charges turned on them and came up with a 6 to 3 verdict.

Maple Leafs, pacemakers in the International section, were beaten 5 to 2 by Maroons in the Forum.

EX-B'S DO IT

The Rangers were leading 3 to 2 half way through the second period. Then some of the ex-Bruins went into action and swung the tide in favor of the Americans.

Harry Oliver and Nels Stewart combined for the tally that made the score 3 all, and Art Chapman sent the Dutton tribe out in front for the first time less than a half minute later.

At the start of the final period big Joe Jerwa, who is making the N. H. L. grade, soloed from his defense position for the fourth Amerks' goal, and "Chappie" passed to "Sweeney" Schriner for the final marker.

The Maroon-Maple Leaf game was a knockdown, drag-out affair. But before the real fireworks started, the Gorman group rung up four goals and practically clinched the game.

There were no less than nine minor penalties called in the first and second periods.

CUBS LOSE

In the third four majors four misconduct and three minors were handed out by Referees Ag Smith and Johnny Mitchell.

The Cubs fell from grace again, losing to New Haven, 3 to 2, at the Garden.

The contesting clubs were tied going into the final period, Frank Jerwa having scored for the Eagles and Ray Getliffe for the Cubs.

Then the visitors forged out in front via a couple of goals by Gus Forslund.

Just before the end of the game Bert McInenly popped in the second and final Cub marker.

New Baseball League for Connecticut

Columbus, O., Jan. 3 (INS)—Intensive organization work will be begun at once in New England, with contacts already established for either a six or eight-club league in Connecticut, Joe F. Carr, promotional director of minor league baseball, announced today.

Carr said representation in the circuit will be sought from the following cities: Hartford, Danbury, Norwalk, Stanford, Torrington, Middleton, Willimantic, Norwich, New London, Bristol, New Britain and Waterbury.

Leroy A. Dissinger Willimantic, Ct., will be in charge of New England promotional work, Carr said.

B. A. A., Unicorn Plan to Reorganize

Former members of the B. A. A. and present members of the Unicorn Club were to meet this afternoon at the Hotel Lenox to consider reorganization plans.

William F. Garcelon, president of the B. A. A., and Clarence A. Baners, president of the Unicorn Club, have issued the call.

The Unicorn club is composed of former B. A. A. members.

Canadian Amateur Ice | Solons Ban U. S. Imports

By BILL GRIMES

Incensed by the ruthless raids instigated by the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has issued a mandate suspending all "imports" to the United States.

And Frederick W. Rubien, president of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, who is secretary of the U. S. Olympic hockey committee has been eased right into the middle of this latest international hockey jam.

For years, it's been well known that all big time amateur hockey in this country and Canada has been a racket. But only those on the inside realize that Canadians promoted the racket on this side of the border.

Canadians residing in Pittsburgh and New York inaugurated the practice of importing players from the Dominion. Soon after the old Arena was erected, Boston Canadians followed suit.

THE SETUP

Roy Schooley, a Canadian, caused the first serious break between the American and Canadian hockey authorities by snatching the Aura Leas out of the O. H. A. to stock up his Yellow Jackets and Hornets of Pittsburgh.

Then Frank Sullivan, who came from one of the various Canadian provinces, sold Emile Coulon the idea of importing players for his Westminster team. "Sully" put the local hockey players behind the "eight ball" by grabbing some of the O. H. A. players Schooley had overlooked.

Since the Schooley regime, the "States" have been very much on the outs with the C. A. H. A., especially the O. H. A., for Roy took food right out of the mouths of the Hewitt children.

With the exception of its illustrious and suave president, Mr. Frederick W. Rubien, who talked his way into the secretaryship of the U. S. Olympic hockey committee, the Eastern Amateur Hockey League is practically an all Canadian organization.

Lester Patrick, manager of the Rangers, owns and operates the Rovers, who will be the Philadelphia Ramblers next season; Red McKenzie, a Canadian professional golfer from Montreal, is the boss of the Sea Gulls of Atlantic City; Dinny Manners, an ex-Torontoan, has Pittsburgh; Billy Boyd, who broke into and bowed out of the N. H. L. with the New York Rangers, is the power behind the throne in Baltimore, and Herb Mitchell, a member of the original Bruins, quit his job as manager of London in the International League to tie up with the Hersey Bars.

EXPENSES

There's the Canadian managerial angle of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, and if you'll prove to me that there's an American in the entire group, I'll buy.

And, remember, Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the U. S. Olympic hockey committee, is the president of that organization.

The "imports," who caused the lastest hockey eruption were obliged to post a $500 bond to enter this country. Furthermore, they were warned by the U. S. Department of Labor not to accept any business offers.

As even Canadians cannot live on the echoes of pucks on the blade of sticks, the Eastern Amateur Hockey League voted to offset the Department edict by allowing the players EXPENSE ACCOUNTS.

Now, isn't that something?

And, don't lose track of the fact that Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the U. S. Olympic hockey committee, is president of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League.

After voting favorably on the expense account motion, the Eastern Amateur Hockey League refused to be annoyed by the three months residence rule of the A. A. U. and, with the exception of the South Atlantic District, talked the authorities into issuing cards to their "imports."

And Mr. Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the U. S. Olympic hockey committee, sanctioned the issuance of these cards.

O, MR. RUBIEN

The trouble between the Eastern Amateur Hockey League and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is a break for the Boston Olympics, a new all-star team composed of native born Americans, which Coach Eddie Jeremiah is welding into a formidable unit.

The Olympics are sanctioned by the New England A. A. A. U. and are in good repute with the Canadian amateur organization.

Charles F. Gorman is arranging games with teams in the Senior Group of Montreal and various O. H. A. teams for the Olympics to be played Sunday afternoons at the Boston Garden.

In the meantime, Frederick W. Rubien will be asked to explain how come he is president of a so-called amateur league, which is a professional outfit, regardless of what angle you look at it, and at the same time secretary of the U. S. Olympic hockey committee, supposedly the acme of the purest of pure amateurism.

ICE BRAWL

Probed BY N. H. L.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 3 (INS)—A thorough probe by National Hockey League officials into the brawl that marked the Montreal Marons-Toronto Maple eLafs game here loomed today.

Six players were sent to the cooler and to the club doctors for repairs as a result of the brawl. The Maroons won, 5 to 2.

The riot, which ended in a free-for-all, followed an injury to Dave Trottier, Maroon left winger, in the final session. Trottier suffered a deep gash in his forehead when he was bumped by Charley Conacher of the eLafs. Conacher was given a five-minute penalty.

Less than a minute later Hooley Smith and Red Horner collided and started swinging fists. Immediately the 38 members of both teams skidded to the center of the arena and began swinging away at each other.

Both Smith and Horner drew major penalties and ten minute match penalties. Lionel Conacher of the Maroons and Davidson of the Leafs also drew major and match penalties.

WIGGLE IN WILSON'S BEST BET

Vanda Cerulea In First Race

By Dave Wilson

(Selections Made for Fast Track.)

BEST BET—WIGGLE IN.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 3—Wiggle In, highly regarded Florida Derby candidate in the Calumet stable, shouldn't experience much difficulty in wiggling into major honors in the one mile of the second number, patterned for three and four-year-old maidens.

FIRST—VANDA CERULEA, TOANO, JOHN WERRING

Just can't go past VANDA CERULEA in searching for the winner. This fleet filly is stepping up a few notches, but she has to be many pounds the best in order to win her last. TOANO displayed a corking performance in placing to Prince Drake. JOHN WERRING, never better than now, will be hard to keep out of the picture.

SECOND—WIGGLE IN, FOREIGN LEGION, WAR GAMES

WIGGLE IN showed well in several western races last summer, and those efforts stamp him a colt of class. Whirled eight furlongs in 1:41 for a final and will be coming up fit as hands can make him. FOREIGN LEGION is held in high regard by stable connections, but has yet to show anything in races. Mayhap that he'll come to life in this number. WAR GAMES flashing good form in finishing third to Bellum and Flag of War in a swiftly run six furlongs dash last time.

THIRD—SPEED, LOOKABOUT, SYLVIA G.

String along with SPEED in this affair. This youngster holds plenty of class and showed to advantage while receiving tighteners behind Empty Bottle last time out. LOOKABOUT comes highly recommended by the clockers. SYLVIA G., second to Lum Joy, figures next best on the strength of that most recent endeavor.

FOURTH—ADVISING ANNA, SCOTCH GOLD, LAUGHING SUN

ADVISING ANNA ran for the well known Mr. Sweeney last trip. Previous form shows that she is capable of far better things. SCOTCH GOLD was a corking victor over Dancing Doll and other fleet sprinters. LAUGHING SUN drubbed Col. Ed and others in a swiftly run race last time. Drops eight pounds and merits better than a fighting chance.

FIFTH—AUTOWIN, INDIANA FLYER, EXETER

AUTOWIN drops 12 pounds off his most recent endeavor and gets in here nicely under a feather of 104 pounds. INDIANA FLYER is highly fancied by the split second timers. EXETER showed to advantage while receiving tightners in a six-furlong sprint last time.

SIXTH—MOUNTAINY MAN, BROWN FEATHERS, MARTIN BARTON

MOUNTAINY MAN, second to Sablin in track record time, needs only to duplicate that most recent endeavor in order to grace the winner's circle. BROWN FEATHERS, on general form, looks all over the one to fear. MARTIN BARTON figures close up.

SEVENTH—EASIEST WAY, UNENCUMBERED, SAND CLOUD

EASIEST WAY gets the top figures on the strength of a recent smashing third to Blessed Again. UNENCUMBERED finished close up to the top one that day and again looks all over the one to fear. SAND CLOUD merits high figures on best efforts.

EIGHTH—JOHN'S BIRTHDAY, DAN SKILLING, JODA

JOHN'S BIRTHDAY is dropping down a few notches and must be accorded a royal chance in an affair of this sort. DAN SKILLING just missedd rubbing Polo Bar last time. JODA figures well on best races.

Just a Trifle Smoother Than You See Around Here

Birger Ruud of Norway gets away on a 269-foot jump to initiate the winter Olympic skiing tests at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany. Ruud is Olympic champion and has such a wide lead on the field that he seems certain to repeat. His three test jumps were for 233, 269 and 256 feet, scoring 348 points. Dock Dorrance of Dartmouth, the U. S. entry, was 18th in the competition with 279 points.

ALDO SPOLDI COMING CHAMPION

WATCH HIM AGAINST ZIVIC

New York, Jan. 3 (US)—The "elimination tournament" fad is on full blast, this time to produce a challenger for Tony Canzoneri's much-desired lightweight title—a fitting and auspicious beginning for the new year.

Not that challengers are lacking for Canzoneri's 135-pound crown, but there seems to be a benevolent desire on the parts of promoters to make the No. 1 title-aspirant be the best man available.

It is with this idea in mind that Madison Square Garden is staging an all-lightweight program tonight, featuring the veteran Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, and Lou Ambers, the Herkimer, N. Y., hurricane.

Klick and Ambers will meet in what is regarded the main-event ten-rounder on tonight's program—a program supported partly by two other ten-rounders bringing Leonard Del Genio, the promising New York Italian, against Bobby Pacho, of Mexico, and Aldo Spoldi, Italy's lightweight champion, against Eddie Zivic, of Pittsburgh.

Ambers has been installed a 6 to 5 favorite to whip the clever Klick. Klick is a cagey, come-from-behind fighter. Ambers is a "windmill" fighter, somewhat on the Jock McAvoy style, and also younger and more aggressive.

Klick, however, might have too much experience for the Herkimer youngster. The San Francisco battler has not been defeated in six successive Garden fights.

Del Genio is a 7 to 5 choice over the hard-hitting Pacho, but the young Italian seems to have a long way to go before he can rate a title crack.

KAYO ARTIST

The real interest on the card, however, will be the Garden debut of Spoldi, already tagged by critics as one of the most dangerous punchers in the lightweight division.

Spoldi has had three fights in America and has won them all via the knockout route. Betting commissioners have made Spoldi as high as 2 to 1 over Zivic.

Kit Klein to Quit Skating This Year

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 3—Kit Klein, America's greatest woman speed skater, will retire at the end of this season.

Miss Klein sails soon for a tour of the women's championship events of Norway and Sweden as well as an "exhibition demonstration" in the winter Olympics at Garmisch, Germany.

The Buffalo brunette gave as her reason for retirement the fact that she now holds every woman's speed skating title possible in North America.

McCoy to Referee At Gordon Show

Eight boxers and 16 wrestlers will take part in the wrestling show to be held at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night. This will be a testimonial show for Jim McDonald, publicity manager for Charlie Gordon.

McDonald was formerly one of Boston's leading boxing promoters, and many of the leading boxers of today have offered their services for this occasion.

Al McCoy, the lightweight, who is the outstanding challenger for the title, will referee the semi-final bout. Joe "Hambone" Kelly has offered his services to referee the Battle Royal.

The main bout Tuesday will bring to Boston the new light heavyweight champion, Paul Adams, who will meet Chief War Eagle. In the semi-final the Mysterious Bat meets Ted Germaine of South Boston.

Bonigli Wins

Joe Bonigli, New England candlepin champion, defeated Francis Chiminello, 1112 to 1065, in a ten-string exhibition at the Quincy alleys.

ZANNELLI In Tri-State BOXING SHOW

The Irish American A. A. of South Boston will open the 1936 season with an intercity show at the Boston Arena next Monday night. Teams from New York, Newark and Boston will compete in six classes—118, 126, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight.

Ralph Zannell

Boston's representatives in the 118 pounds class will be Gerald Hall of So. Braintree and Domenic Salvati of E. Boston.

Jimmy McCarron of Somerville and Freddie Camuso will uphold the lightweight honor.

Ralph Zannelli of Providence will compete in the 147 pounds class. The Rhode Island champion is the Golden Glove and Diamond Belt champion of 1935, and one of the greatest club fighters ever developed in New England. His team mate will be Jackie Capparell of Roxbury.

Vincent Pimpinella of the Trinity Club of New York will be the 147 pound nomination from Gotham. Newark has named John Zatansky of Perth Amboy High School, winner of the New Jersey Golden Belt title in 1935.

ROBERT Back in Town TOMORROW

Yvon Robert, French-Canadian heavyweight wrestler whom both Dan O'Mahoney, the champion, and Ed Don George refused to meet, will parade his wrestling wares before Boston fans next Friday night at Boston Garden.

Those same fans will be able to judge whether Robert's quick triumph over Hans Steinke was a fluke or the real goods.

Promoter Paul Bowser has given Robert a tough assignment. He has paired him with Jim Browning, one of the greatest heavyweights in the game and a man recognized at one time as world champion by New York and other states.

Browning has put up a check for $2500 which wil serve as an appearance forfeit.

"In the future where Robert is concerned all the boys I match him with are going to have to put up forfeits," Bowser said today. "I don't want any more 'running out.' It sinks me financially."

Robert, who has been spending the holidays in Montreal with his parents, will arrive here tomorrow and go into training at Jerry Buckley's gymnasium down on Friend street. He has been engaging in light drills at Montreal.

He worked hard for 10 days before the George match was cancelled, so should need but very little work to get in the pink for the Browning match.

Browning will do his training on his farm at Verona, Mo., where he has a small gymnasium, in which is a ring.

TARZAN

Adventure

Just Beginning in the Boston Sunday Post

Full page of colored pictures each week

Here's a hint:

Making his way silently to the village, Tarzan comes to a great long oblong meeting house brilliantly lighted. Semi-faint sounds of voices, laughter, shouts. He hears the sounds of feasting and merrymaking from within. Stealthily he approaches nearer and nearer. He reaches the house. Agile as a cat, the ape man quickly climbs to the roof of the meeting house. Through a hole in the roof he peers down upon all that goes on within.

Shouts, cries, clink of drinking vessels, ribald laughter.

VOICES: "Hail the queen, Sigreda! Has she not a kiss for her betrothed?"

IVAR (gruffly): "That she has! Come, Sigreda, kiss me."

SIGREDA: "Never! Rather than wed you, the slayer of my dear Thorik, I will die myself!"

IVAR (suddenly): "Ho! She has stolen the dagger from my belt. Stop her before she kills herself."

TARZAN (fiercely): "I am Tarzan! Beware!"

THIRD VOICE: "Stop him! He has seized Sigreda."

TARZAN (sotto voce): "Quick, Sigreda, follow me. I come from Thorik to save you."

IVAR: "Fools! Stop them! This is no god, but a man who has come through the roof. After them!"

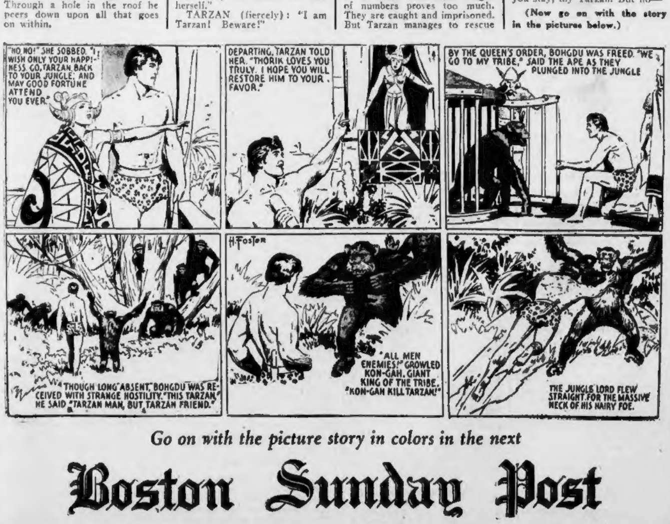
A loud, mighty shout, rattling of swords, then dim down. Valiantly Tarzan battles the horde of Vikings to save Sigreda, but to no avail. The sheer weight of numbers proves too much. They are caught and imprisoned. But Tarzan manages to rescue her and brings her back to Thorik, her betrothed.

SIGREDA: "Tarzan, my beloved, you have saved my life, and now I am yours. Tomorrow we shall be wed."

TARZAN—"Nay, that cannot be. You are Thorik's. I am not of your people. I belong to the jungle. That is my home. Go you now to your home, in the heart of Thorik. Farewell!"

SIGREDA: "I would have you stay, my Tarzan. But no—"

(Now go on with the story in the pictures below.)



"NO NO!" SHE SOBBED. "I WISH ONLY YOUR HAPPINESS. GO, TARZAN, BACK TO YOUR JUNGLE; AND MAY GOOD FORTUNE ATTEND YOU EVER."
DEPARTING, TARZAN TOLD HER, "THORIK LOVES YOU TRULY. I HOPE YOU WILL RESTORE HIM TO YOUR FAVOR."
BY THE QUEEN'S ORDER, BOHGDU WAS FREED. "WE GO TO MY TRIBE," SAID THE APE AS THEY PLUNGED INTO THE JUNGLE
THOUGH LONG ABSENT, BOHGDU WAS RECEIVED WITH STRANGE HOSTILITY. "THIS TARZAN," HE SAID "TARZAN MAN, BUT TARZAN FRIEND."

"ALL MEN ENEMIES!" GROWLED KON-GAH, GIANT KING OF THE TRIBE. "KON-GAH KILL TARZAN!"

ADVENTURERS PLAN GALA PROGRAMS

Its big New Year celebration over, the Columbia's Junior Adventurers Clubs have set out to prepare gala programs for the coming season.

The nation-wide membership has passed the 400,000 mark and more members are signing up each day. Hockey teams are out on the ice every afternoon and many clubs are matching platoons for club and city championships.

Already members are looking forward to spring and baseball and at many meetings are holding their own "winter trades," exchanging bats and gloves for needed equipment. Even the girls are showing keen interest in the base ball plans and will be right out there on the field as soon as the weather is right.

The Snuffy Smith song from Columbia Pictures' new Barney Google cartoon comedies is catching on with the Adventurers and they are continually singing:

Barney's tetched in the head.
Oh Barney's tetched in the head.
He's just a phoney, the big baloney
Barney's tetched in the head.
Patch mah britches, patch mah britches
Barney's tetched in the head.

Only instead of "Barney" they substitute the names of their friends and sing away at the meetings "Johnny's tetched in the head" or Sally or Mickey or whatever the friends' names are.

Other catch lines that can be substituted are: "He puts onions on his bunions" or "His favorite dish is nuts and fish" or "Goodness Gracious most bodacious" and a lot of others.

British Propaganda and American Opinion

WE want to like England and we want England to like us.

Our peoples have gone a long way together in the workshop of self-government and free institutions.

Identity of language, the possession in common of a great literature, the parallels in our history and experience—all make for mutual understanding.

This understanding has a value to the world, as well as to each of us, and should therefore be guarded, and not lightly impaired.

This is why America REGRETS and RESENTS the persistent effort of certain misguided elements in England to manipulate public opinion in the United States to the service of PURELY BRITISH PURPOSES AND POLICIES, which have no rootage in American thought or interests and with which we as a people are not concerned.

* * *

GREAT BRITAIN is an old offender in this respect.

From the earliest days of our independence she has had the idea that she could "kid" us or "con" us by artful words or adroit interventions, diplomatic and otherwise, and make us acquiescent in her designs or contributors of support when she found herself under pressure in any part of the world.

WE SAW PLENTY OF THIS IN THE LAST WAR WHEN WE WERE CALLED UPON TO UPHOLD ENGLAND BOTH AT HOME AND ABROAD BY VAST LOANS, WHICH SHE PROMISED, BUT HAS SINCE REFUSED, TO PAY BACK.

Such ingratitude and bad faith are easier to bear, however, than the smug assumption of Great Britain that she can, whenever she desires, put it over on us again with the aid of her propagandists, whom she always has in readiness.

Has she forgotten the fiasco of her "Galloping" Smith, the talky barrister, afterwards to become Lord Birkenhead, whom she sent over at the outbreak of the Great War to tell us where our duty lay?

* * *

HIS FORCED RECALL IN THE MIDST OF HIS AMERICAN TOUR SHOULD HAVE BEEN A LESSON TO ENGLAND, BUT IT HAS EVIDENTLY BEEN FORGOTTEN.

For otherwise we should hardly now be undergoing a similar visit from another propagandist of like ineptitude.

We refer again to the irritating presence in our midst and the mischievous public utterances of Archbishop Temple of York.

Our people know perfectly well why England is resisting Italy's advance in Ethiopia.

The expressions of the English Archbishop, derogatory to Italy and exalting England, do not deceive us.

It is not because of England's devotion to the League of Nations or the so-called principle of "collective peace" that she is invoking sanctions against Italy and seeking military allies among the smaller European nations.

ENGLAND IS PREPARED TO FIGHT ITALY BECAUSE OF THE APPREHENSION THAT ONE IMPERIALISM FEELS AT THE BIRTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF ANOTHER.

* * *

ENGLAND has long enjoyed an undisputed ascendancy in the Mediterranean.

Italy's rapid post-war growth in military and naval strength threatens that ascendancy.

England has long been the leading Power in the conquest and sub-division of Africa.

Italy threatens to disturb this position of conceded mastery in Africa.

England, which has gained her far-flung empire by the conquest of weaker peoples and the eviction of rightful possessors, realizes that her unpopulated colonies and lines of communication will be more difficult to protect if a colonially ambitious nation, like Italy, grows too bold or too strong.

Italy's surprise at England's opposition springs from the knowledge that she is attempting only what England has done throughout her history.

Indeed England is pursuing today her historic purpose of trade monopoly established and maintained by shrewd diplomacy and force of arms—but her technique has changed with the times.

War has a bad name, so we see the same old perfidious Albion—not waging war—but WAGING SANCTIONS.

Not openly and avowedly fighting for empire and trade but, in her own selfish interests, blocking Italy's development through the League of Nations, the shattered remains of which she and France completely control.

Let England practice her duplicities on European nations and on her own people if she will, but not send her propagandists, reverend or otherwise, to this country to inflict those duplicities on the American people.

The defense of English policy by that smug propagandist the Archbishop of York and Primate of England is a little too thin—his presentation of England's altruistic aims a bit too unbelievable for American consumption.

His description of the British flag trailing peacefully in the wake of trade is a trifle too unconvincing.

He has not his sequence right.

* * *

THOSE who have read history remember that where the Union Jack has gone in the past blood has followed the flag and trade has followed the blood.

Americans have reason to know Engla pretty well by this time and do not believe h specious promises and pretensions.

Furthermore, the word of a defaulter is NEVER good.

There IS a Choice

"TO WHOM shall ye turn? To Christ or to Lenin?"

In this manner, William Cardinal O'Connell's New Year pastoral letter brings the question of Communism to every man and woman in New England.

Nineteen centuries ago Christ was born in Bethlehem. For thirty-three years he walked the earth, teaching a new philosophy of brotherly love—not compulsion, nor hatred, nor class warfare.

Today in Russia there lies the corpse of a man who died a decade ago. He taught brotherly suspicion—and force and jealousy and conflict between all divisions of society.

There is a choice. And all must make it. Shall it be the God who gave His life for all mankind? Or the corpse of a man who robbed and murdered and butchered?

Success Is Assured

Progressive and worthy of general support are the efforts of the New England Council and the governors of the six New England states to bring new industries to this section.

As long as factories are idle men will be idle. And the rise in relief rolls will be in proportion to the fall in payrolls.

This fact makes mandatory the success of the new industries campaign, for relief employment is at best temporary employment, in which there is neither happiness nor security.

But there is another fact that goes far to insure the campaign's success. NEW ENGLAND IS THE MANUFACTURER'S BEST BET.

The abundance of our natural resources, the availability of our capital, the skill of our workmen, the richness of our markets and the experience of our managements give employers advantages far greater than those met with in most vicinities.

Again Death Strikes

Again Death took the wheel!

The picture shows all that remained of an automobile which killed three young men and injured five in a West Newton holiday collision.

Fast moving traffic. The purr of a racing motor. A moment of uncertainty. Danger! The screech of brakes. Crash! Steel crumples. Glass flies. Death strikes!

A terrific penalty, this, for a moment of speed!

Terrific, yes, but it is only one of the highway tragedies that last year opened graves for nearly eight hundred Massachusetts residents.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Don't live with your in-laws!"

There's a New Year resolution that would be cheered by practically every American family. A fact which the Bernarr Macfadden Foundation discovered when it started to take a national poll of ideas as to what constitutes Ideal Marriage.

Elsie Robinson

Whereupon it immediately became apparent that most of us believe emphatically that IN-LAWS DON'T.

Oregon's report was typical, with a decision of 34 to one against Dear Mama et al. All votes being based on experience, according to their registrants' red hot avowal. With side remarks which this paper can't print.

So there you have our All American decision on the In-Law question. BUT WHY?

WHAT'S THE MATTER

What's there so innately mean, mischievous, malignant, baleful, burdensome, base, detestable, depraved, poisonous, pernicious and generally pesty about being an in-law?

THERE ISN'T.

The fault lies not in the role itself, nor even in the unfortunate person who must fill it, but in the way we handle it.

There is no degree of meddling, bullying, double-crossing, talebearing or torturing which we will not commit in the name of love.

Nor is rudeness the worst part of our private program. Our dishonesty to each other is even more demoralizing than our boorishness. If there's one place where courageous honesty is most needed, it is in the home.

CAN BE PREVENTED

The enforced intimacy of family life enforces conditions which may become appalling unless handled frankly. Yet there's probably less honesty, more cowardice in homes than in any other spot on earth.

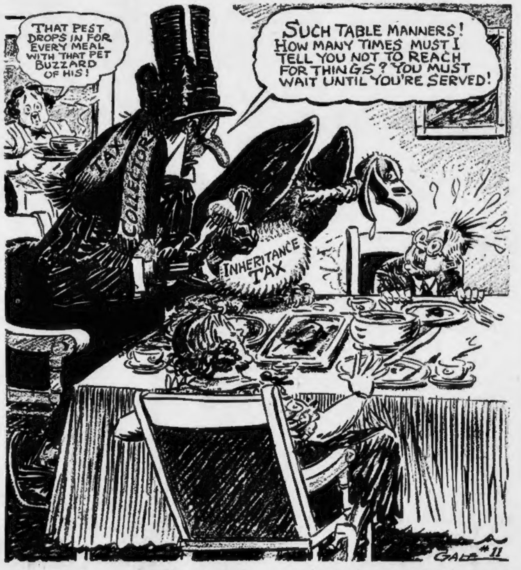
It's the greater pity, because most of our domestic misery could be prevented or cured by straight talk. If we were as frank with each other as we are with any stranger or fellow worker we could easily iron out any difficulty. And as easily rid ourselves of downright parasites and nuisances.

There might, it is true, be a few tears or pouts at first, but there would be immeasurably more respect and loving kindness.

Just tell the other fellow when and where to head in . . . and listen amiably when he tells us the same. Surely that's not a difficult program. But it's beyond us. Try as we will, we can't nerve ourselves to speak the simple truth with those who share our bed and board. So we go on bullying and bleating, lying and lamenting—

And blaming it on the In-Laws! PHOOEY!

The Crape Hanger



THAT PEST DROPS IN FOR EVERY MEAL WITH THAT PET BUZZARD OF HIS!
SUCH TABLE MANNERS! HOW MANY TIMES MUST I TELL YOU NOT TO REACH FOR THINGS? YOU MUST WAIT UNTIL YOU'RE SERVED!
TAX COLLECTOR
INHERITANCE TAX
GALE #11

True, the Taxpayer provides the meal, but he may not eat until the Tax Collector has been served from soup to nuts.

The best for the guest even when he is the uninvited and unwelcome guest.

As for that buzzard, he is waiting to take all that the Taxpayer leaves—if he is left with anything.

Isn't it about time for honest, hard-working people to put that pest in his place at the foot of the table, below the salt?

Riches and Romance

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

From South America, greatest field of adventure left on earth, comes three arresting items in the Human Side of the News. You remember Rudyard Kipling's child of nature, Mowgli? The child who was snatched from a native village of India by a tiger, was dropped by the brute and then made its way to a den of wolves which adopted it, taught it all the wondrous love of the jungle and reared it to supermanhood — a veritable Tarzan?

Edwin C. Hill

Real life and this modern day have produced in the jungles of San Salvador, in Central America, another such Mowgli. The owner of a coffee estate near Acajutla, the whole a mere clearing in the jungle, was hunting deer one night.

Through the shadows he glimpsed a small figure bounding along with the speed and grace of a fawn. The senor abandoned the deer-hunting for what seemed to be much more interesting game.

A rapid survey revealed human footprints left behind by the fleeing figure. The chase came to nothing that night, but the following day the coffee planter traced the footprints to a cave, and with the assistance of his men, finally captured the strange, young animal who lurked within. It was a boy about eight years old, human in form and in nothing else.

FOUGHT LIKE ANIMAL

He fought with the savagery of a young jaguar, clawing and biting. His strength for a child so young was astounding. They had to bind him with ropes before he could be taken to the ranch house. It was weeks before he was even half tamed. And now he is the subject of an arresting experiment which is being carried out at the school in Sonsonate, in Salvador.

With the passing of the Old Tiger of Venezuela, Vincente Gomez, the dictator, the second richest man in the southern continent, adventures into another world. The wealth of Gomez has been estimated at as much as a quarter of a billion dollars, accumulated in his 27 years as master of Venevuela.

The richest of all South Americans is Senor Simon Patino; the king of Bolivia, his native country. In whatever country you may dwell, whether it be China or the United States of America, you contribute a mite to the vast fortune of Patino if you purchase a tin container of any sort.

RICHER THAN FORD

At the beginning of this century, Patino was an obscure shopkeeper in Lapaz. After the fashion of minor financiers in our own old West, he grubstaked a prospector who was venturing into the Bolivian highlands in search of tin.

The prospector returned with good news, and Patino plunged with every bolivar he had, with his wife's money, and with everything he could borrow. And he found what he went after—the richest deposits of tin the world knows today.

The name of General Candido Rondon of Brazil is again in the news. Here is one of the most interesting personalities of South America. It was General Rondon, then a colonel, I believe, who showed the late former President Roosevelt the way to the River of Doubt in the unexplored hinterland of Brazil. And it was Colonel now General, Rondon who had the name of the river changed to El Rio Roosevelt.

It was Rondon who finally connected the State of Matto Grosso, the fourth largest state of Brazil, with the rest of the republic. Until recently that vast, trackless, mysterious jungle state of over 570,000 square miles was unknown country to the white man.

ABOUNDS IN MINERALS

Colonel Fawcett, British explorer, was swallowed up in its jungle 15 years ago and has never been heard of since. It was General Rondon, an army engineer, who ran telegraph wires into key position of the jungle state, and so netted it to the rest of the Republic. Even so, it remains today a temptation and a challenge to explorers and adventurers.

Of all the regions of the earth, except perhaps the Antarctic, the Matto Grosso jungle is the most inviting to those whose highest ambition in life is to wrest from nature her most hidden secrets. Diamonds are there, and rich deposits of gold. Along the river are native villages and towns, widely scattered and thinly populated.

Back in the jungles are tribes of Indians that have been scarcely identified. The legend persists that there dwells a tribe of white Indians, fair haired, fair-skinned and blue-eyed. It was in search of this legendary tribe that Colonel Fawcett disappeared into Matto Grosso. So, therefore, if you seek the unusual, the adventurous, go to South America.

New York Day by Day -:- -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 3—Thoughts while strolling: Where are all those jobs friends lined up for Jimmy Walker? Morton Downey makes me think of Danny Deever. Three big magazines are to scalp the communistic book critics. When more elaborate bal masque costumes are designed, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken will wear them.

Look alikes: Henry Luce and Charles V. MacArthur. Reunion suggestion: A round-up of that gang in the New Amsterdam lobby. What became of Diana Wynyard? Off year for the debutantes—all the smart, and beautiful women are middle aged. I always want to rub out those II's and III's after names.

Study in impishness: Harry Evans. Tough day for a barber—shaving Max Schmeling, Bill Lengel and Barney Gallant in a row. Or cutting Jay Flippen's hair. Nobody can top Loretta Young in giving a smile thata. Or bow from the hips like Dennis King. Sure fire title for a best seller, "Lindbergh Speaks."

Celebrity Harolds: Webster, Ross and Vanderbilt. Robert C. Sherwood walking with a dachshund would be a shot for the photographers. Nobody fits a country boy's idea of a city slicker better than Sailing Baruch. Memory: Weekly removal of the dead bugs from the corner arc light.

Doggy name: Emily Post. For the perennial youngster list: Ashton Stevens. New word for the ladies: "gowithits." You know, like accessories. Somebody is always catching me sneaking peeks in the window mirrors. Overheard: "Let's drop into No. 21 and try to look celebrityish."

The Americanization of grand opera has been so rapid the general public scarcely recognized it. Lawrence Tibbett is now the reigning male canary. And Grace Moore, Helen Jepson, Suzanne Fisher and Gladys Swarthout are leading female song birds.

Miss Moore's and Miss Jepson's careers are strikingly similar. Miss Moore came from a Tennessee village, born humbly. Miss Jepson was also reared in a small town, clerking in a store where she was put in charge of phonographs. She married young and a part of her routine was scrubbing floors, doing the wash and indulging other indelicacies of domesticity.

Lawrence Riley, after one year of successful authorship, is among the few playwrights to feather the nest. He wrote the hit, "Personal Appearance," which catapulted him into a $1500-a-week chore in Hollywood. He put a manager in charge of his play royalties and movie salary and decided to live on $100 a week. All ready he has saved enough for investments that bring him a trifle more than $100 a week upon which he says he can live, heigh-ho, from now on.

Thingumbobs: Carol McComas is married to a Shanghai doctor and living there . . . Marlene Dietrich is a cloudy day fan . . . Sam Morton, Four Mortons, can do a buck and wing at 78 . . . The Will Rogerses daughter Mary is considering a London dramatic offer . . . Rob Wagner and Eddie Guest were once shipmates on a Detroit newspaper . . . John Barrymore is still ace silk pajama buyer in America . . . Noel Coward holds English championship . . . O. Henry used "ain't" when he felt like it in his stories.

Frank Sullivan bought a sporty bicycle for a neighbor's son in Saratoga but the youngster almost didn't get it. After sitting around on it for hours, admiring the gadgets, Sullivan couldn't bear the thought of giving it away.

Bible Text: "Even a fool when he holdeth his peace is counted wise."—Proverbs 17:28. Suggested by the Rev. William A. Grove, Tremont Temple.
